CANADA'S WAR BILL.

The Struggle is Costing Roundly $800,000 a Day.

A year of war has cost Canada $90,000,000. The great struggle in which many Canadians have already laid down their lives is also calling for great financial sacrifices. It is costing Canada, in fact, $300,000 a day.

Figuring this out even more finely, it will be apparent that Canadians are going down into their pockets to pay the expenses of the present struggle at the rate of nearly $13,000 an hour or about $225 a minute. And the statistician who cares to reduce his calculations to the ultimate unit will discover, of course, that the Canadian financial war clock is ticking at the rate of about $4 per second.

The total war expenditure up to July 31, or practically twelve months after the war was declared on August 4 last year, was $81,750,000. Adding to this the expenditures since that date it will be seen, as stated, that so far Canadians have already laid down their lives in the best part of $90,000,000 for their convictions. The ratio of expense, of course, is going up all the time as the Dominion places more and more troops in the field.

Almost the whole expenditure is military in character. Canada's navy, especially now that German cruisers have been driven from the sea, cost her comparatively very little. The navy items are in the equipment and upkeep of men at home, in England, and at the front. The pay of the troops alone costs little less than $100,000 per day.

Of the $90,000,000 which constitutes the total expense of the war so far $50,000,000 was voted at the special August session of Parliament last year and $40,000,000 comes out of the war appropriation of $190,000,000 made at the last session and $40,000,000 of the last session and which is being borrowed in England.
