PROF. DALL SPEAKS

About His Trip to Scotland—Everybody Optimistic.

Prof. John Dall, of Queen's Theological College, returned to the city on Tuesday afternoon after five months vacation in Scotland. On Wednesday morning when seen by a Whig reporter, Prof. Dall spoke about the anti-German mobs that he beheld along the wharves at Liverpool when he landed there last spring, three days after the S. S. Lusitania had been sunk by German submarines.

No pessimism whatever reigns in the British Isles, stated Prof. Dall. Everyone now fully realizes that victory is coming to the Allied cause.

Prof. Dall said that nearly everyone was wearing the military uniform in the British Isles. He was pleased to see so many soldiers in the Limestone City.

Prof. Dall sailed from Liverpool a week ago last Friday aboard the steamer Messanabia, the ship taking a long round-about course to the north to evade the German submarines, which are quickly disappearing from the seas and nothing but annihilation awaits Germany's submarine warfare.

"Till the Boys Come Home," a Boy's Production, Is New British Song

Ivor Novello, Who Composed the Air Which Rivals "Tipperary" in the Affections of Tommy Atkins, Is but Twenty Years Old.

(Special to the Herald)
Herald Bureau,
No. 150 Fleet Street,
London, Sept. 22.

High up in a pretty flat over the Strand Theatre lives Ivor Novello, the twenty-year-old young man who composed "Till the Boys Come Home," which is certainly the most popular war air here since "Tipperary." For months the men in khaki have sung it as they swing through the streets and lanes; no concert is complete without it, every office boy whistles it and recruiting bands blare it forth and the few Italian street organs that remain grind it out with variations.

It is not a ballad to fire the martial spirit, but rather a reminder of home set to a swinging yet most touching melody. Here are the words of the chorus:

"Keep the home fires burning,
While your hearts are yearning,
Though your lads are far away
They dream of home,
There's a silver lining

Through the dark cloud shining,
Turn the dark cloud inside out
Till the boys come home."

Young Ivor Novello, a born composer, is a brilliant pianist and was one of the most accomplished choristers in England, but it was "Till the Boys Come Home" which has given him fame.

"I do not know what inspired me to compose the song," he remarked to me. "I had in my mind the idea of keeping the homes as happy as possible while the soldiers are away, and in half an hour I had invented the air, not a note of which has since been altered."

His later song, "Laddie in Khaki," strikes a catching note, but "Till the Boys Come Home" remains the favorite, in fact, there is no escaping it. Of this song Lady Tree wrote to Novello thus:—"It must be a great pride to you to see the soldiers' delight in your music. How splendid for you to have written the war song! That half glad, half wistful song haunts me now wherever one goes and it will echo all over the world."

Letters to the Editor

Michael Maker Explains.
Napane, Oct. 2.—(To the Editor): In your issue of Sept. 25th you gave prominence to the fact that I was arrested the week previous in Napane by Provincial Inspector H. Reburn on a charge of "counselling others to commit a crime."

In justice to myself I wish to state that my trial came off here on Sept. 23rd, being by Justice Middleton, the verdict being by a four witness jury, and I was honorably acquitted of a deed that I did not perpetrate, thanks to the just laws of Canada and the twelve men who sat on my case.

I am a business man in this town and will thank you very kindly if you will do me the justice of inserting this letter.—Michael Maker.
