There was a happy gathering at the Royal Hotel, on Friday night, when the proprietor, John Cousineau and his wife, celebrated the 21st anniversary of their marriage, surrounded by a large number of their friends. During the evening, Mr. and Mrs. A. Wendling, of Brockville, motored here and as the day marked the 31st anniversary of their marriage, they joined in the festivities, Thirty-five couple were present, and several hours were very pleasantly spent in games, music and dancing, after which the guests sat down to a fine dinner, which had been prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Cousineau,

---- A pleasant feature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Cousineau, of a library table and Morris chair. The presentation was made by T. A. de Forge, on behaif of the hotel staff. The latter, in making the presentation, expressed the best wishes of all to the genial hotelkeeper, and his wife, at the same time wishing them many more years of happiness and prosperity. Mr. Cousineau, in a neat speech, returned sincere thanks for the kind remembrance.

All the guests sat for a flashlight photograph during the evening, which proved a most delightful one for all who were present. Mr. and Mrs. Wendling have many friends in this city, who extend their best wishes. Mr. Wendling is a cousin of Mr. Cousineau. The guests present from outside the city included Mr. and Mrs. Robert McLaughlin and daughter, Moscow; Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, of Pelow, and Mrs. Mary Smith, of Ganarogue.

A Thrifty Duchess.

The Duchess of Portland is all on the side of personal economy, and very ready to approve those features of the budget which bring home the silliness-to say the least-of waste. Frugality is an old habit with her. Long before Mr. McKenna put tea beyond the reach of victims of his super-taxes, the mistress of Welbeck had forsworn the five o'clock habit. Nor will the immunity of wine from extra taxation make her look to champagne as a substitute. She is one of those wonderful people who eat nothing and still less, and at the same time make the most of life The usual motive for an austere dietary is absent in the case of the Duchess. She has a splendid figure.
