VALUE OF THE SMALL CITY DAIL

Newspaperdom; a brainy New York publication, is pleased to learn that many national advertisers have begun to give serious consideration to the value of the smaller city dailies in their advertising campaigns. These newspapers are proportionately important and influential in the great dailies published in larger populated centres. In many instances, smaller daily publishers are working onward and upward along a tortuous and oft-discourag-

There are a few plaudits from the galleries over successes and achievements secured by these indispensable factors in the business and home life affairs of the zones in which they are published. The smaller daily publisher frequently has larger and more difficult problems to solve, according to his opportunity, than has the publisher of the great metropolitan newspaper The smaller daily is the home and business friend of the people of communities which take its utterances and its influence to heart. The smaller newspaper, in proportion to its circulation, has a far greater influence for good or evil than the great newspaper organization.

The smaller daily has a place in its community which can never be filled by metropolitan newspapers for the laws governing the fundamental principles of each are distinctively foreign to any possibility of intermingling. Newspaperdom believes that a new era of recognition and prosperity has set in for the smaller city daily, and it believes that, within the next five years, their advertising pages will fully demon strate Newspaperdom's belief.

Heretofore, the National advertis er has relied too much on farm pa pers and magazines to cover all the territory outside the metropolitan centres. Now the more wide-awake National advertiser has, through sad experience, realized his mistake trying to cover a large territory with the scattered circulation of National media. He has found that the news papers in the smaller cities circulate not only in the cities, but also in the rural districts, thus reaching and covering thoroughly a rich and vir-

While these newspapers have not politan dailies, still, the same principles of concentrated circulation and purchasing power apply fully as strongly as in the case of the large city daily. The people reached by the smaller city newspaper, are those in the great middle class -those known to be most responsible to advertisements. The very rich seldom read advertisements, and the poor cannot buy, even if they have the desire, but the people in this middle class have large purchasing power back of them, will spend money you approach them rightly (through their local newspaper), and are the very people most advertisers are trying to reach, through roundabout

Montreal Gazette The Chamber of Commerce of Antadministrators of the Belgian provnces have paid a /ninth monthly instalment of a German war levy, making the total 340,000,000 francs, or about $72,000,000. In the part of Belgium held by the invading army there is considerable industrial activity in sections, and a fair harvest is reported to have been reaped. After meeting such demands not much of the profit will be left with the communities concerned. The Quadruple Entente powers will have precedent for a tremendous war levy on Germany if they hold the stronger position when the war ends.
