ENGLAND.
By H. C. Gambley, Kingston.
O little isle in the sea!
O little isle in the sea!
Help us to patience in suffering.
Help us to be true to the end.
Loyal to truth and to friendship.
Just, if stern, to thy foes.
Let me forever follow
Where the flag of England goes.

Let me be faithful in sorrow.
Let me be patient in pain.
Out with the slanders and calumnies.
Way with the scorners' disdain:
Only he shall be worthy
To carry thy name on his brow.
He who has sworn to follow.
Has sworn to support thee now.

Calm though the Zepplin raid.
Unmoved 'mid the furies of men.
Help me to bear one burden
As thou hast borne ten.
Stern, 'midst the travail of nations,
Sure and swift in thy aim,
Where goes the flag of England
There goes Justice to reign.

Hold up her hands lest they weary.
Hold up her hands lest they fail.
The Hosts of the Mighty are with her
The wicked shall never prevail.
God from His throne hath spoken,
God the Supreme over all,
For Mercy and Peace and Justice
Must fall if England fall.
