

QUEER NEW SHIPS OF BRITISH NAVY

Have Enabled Us to Regain the Command of the Sea At the Dardanelles--They Are Immune From Submarines.

How Britain solved the German submarine problem by the invention of a new type of warship is entertainingly told by F. Ashmead Bartlett in the London Times. A few German torpedoes well aimed had forced the British fleet to retire to sheltered harbors, protected by booms and nets, while the Turks exited. Then the brains at home set to work to design craft which could carry the guns of battleships without being their vulnerability to submarine attack. Only a nation with absolute command of the sea and with unlimited shipbuilding resources could have set to work to replace one fleet with another of an entirely different type, at a few hours' notice, in the middle of a great war, while at the same time blockading the German fleet and holding all the world's trade routes.

One fine day in July the first of the new craft arrived. She was unlike any other vessel ever seen in these parts, having a low freeboard, almost flush with the water, a 9.2-inch gun in her bows and a long 6-inch astern. She looked more like a Chinese pagoda than a ship, but she talked like one all right, as the Turks found a few days later when she went out and tried a few shots at Asia for practice. She was followed by another little bird of passage even smaller, armed with two brand new, beautiful 6-inch guns. She was so small and so young that no one had even taken the trouble to baptise her, so she carried a number in lieu of a name to live on her; there is no room for that—they apparently hang on anywhere. The Turks must have regarded her arrival with mingled contempt and amusement; but they sang a different tune when one day she went outside to celebrate, and they found that this baby of the deep could throw 100 pounds of high explosive 2 miles without over-reaching herself.

The New Monitors. The next arrival caused somewhat of a sensation, not only to the enemy, but to our own troops. One afternoon there appeared at the entrance of Kephale harbor an amazing-looking object. She could hardly be said to steam up, but rather wobbled into port, like a huge goose primed for Michaelmas. It was impossible to tell at a distance whether she was broadside on, or showing her bows or her stern, for she seemed to be quite round. Her high sides held aloft an absolutely flat deck, on which nothing showed except an enormous turret, from which projected two guns or enormous girth and length, whilst rising from her centre, like the giant of some California forest, was a huge striped tripod, bearing aloft a kind of oblong jewel box. With great difficulty, steering vitiably, she made her way through the crowded harbour and dropped her anchor with the eyes of thousand.

The fire broke out in one of the bedrooms in the second storey. The family were aroused and all of them escaped from the building. When she reached the sidewalk, Mrs. Lewis became confused. Believing one of her young sons was in the building, she rushed back into the house, and was overcome by the smoke, and the firemen were unable to locate her. After the fire was extinguished the body was found and taken to the morgue, and an inquest was opened.

EXEMPTIONS REVOKED.

British Government Reserves Right to Requisition Any Vessel. London, Nov. 9.—The Times announces that the British Government already has revoked the decision exempting from requisition vessels loading wheat in the United States before December 15th. The reason for the revocation was that owners of vessels employed in other important trades, also had applied for exemption, and if exemptions were freely granted the fleets from which the vessels could be requisitioned in the future would have been steadily diminished.

this purpose and have been operated by Germans masked as Chinese coolies, and by many Chinese helpers. From Shanghai these officers have found their way to New York City, either through South American ports or California. "A large number of German soldiers are held in camps situated in a triangle made between three Siberian cities. "These officers have been receiving money through Red Cross agencies, from friends and relatives in Germany, and have used this money successfully in bribing Russian guards, not only to allow them to escape, but to furnish them with Russian passports and to take them down to the points at which they can be picked up by the caravans. "It is only the officers who are picked up in this way. As soon as these men reach New York they are supplied with money and fraudulent passports.

Parcels Rates. The rate of postage on parcels to England is 12 cents a lb., or fraction thereof, and this rate can be applied to parcels addressed to soldiers who are known to be still in England. Where there is doubt as to the soldier being still in England, the French rate should be employed so as to ensure the prompt delivery of the parcel. Parcel must be prepaid according to the following rates: For 1 lb. or less $.32 Over 1 lb. and less than 2 lbs.40 Over 2 lbs. and less than 3 lbs.48 Over 3 lbs. and less than 4 lbs.56 Over 4 lbs. and less than 5 lbs.64 Over 5 lbs. and less than 6 lbs.72 Over 6 lbs. and less than 7 lbs.80 Over 7 lbs. and less than 8 lbs.88 Over 8 lbs. and less than 9 lbs.96 Over 9 lbs. and less than 10 lbs. 1.04 Over 10 lbs. and less than 11 lbs. . . . 1.12

Must Have Declaration. Every parcel must carry a customs declaration properly filled out and securely attached. There are four conditions which have to be observed in respect of every parcel. First, it must be prepaid. If there be any deficiency in the postage a parcel cannot be forwarded. Second, it must be so completely addressed as to be reasonably sure of finding the person to whom it is sent. Parcels for soldiers which are insufficiently addressed will not be accepted by the army post office in London. Mail for civilians which is insufficiently addressed stands a good chance of being delivered. The authorities do their best to dig out the addresses. But in the case of soldiers the difficulty of finding a man without a full address is so great that the army post office simply throws out anything which does not fulfil this regulation. Third, a parcel must in no circumstances exceed 11 pounds in weight. Fourth, it must be so packed as to be reasonably secure against the inevitable abuses to which it will be subjected in transit.

WHEN TO FORWARD GIFTS TO SOLDIERS. Kingstonsians Should Mail Parcels to Cairo By November 25th And to England And France Before December 7th, the Postmaster Says. Mail for Canadian soldiers in France and England, if it is to be delivered before Christmas, ought to leave Kingston before the end of this month. Post office officials say that parcels, etc., mailed before December 7th have a pretty good chance of being delivered before Christmas; things mailed after that date have a pretty poor chance. To be safe, it is advisable that persons wishing to send Christmas presents to their friends in the trenches should regard the end of this month as about the last time for mailing. Parcels and letters for British and Canadian expeditionary forces should bear full details of the addressee's rank, number, military unit, etc., and be addressed to Expeditionary Forces, care of G. P. O., London, England. So that there may be no mistake in this connection, the post office has issued printed directions. They say that mail should be addressed as follows: (a) Regimental number. (b) Rank. (c) Name. (d) Squadron, battery or company. (e) Battalion, regiment (or other unit), staff appointment or department. (f) Canadian contingent. (g) British expeditionary force. (h) Army post office, London, England. Unnecessary mention of higher formations such as brigades, divisions, is strictly forbidden, as it causes delay. Must Have Declaration. Dardanelles Parcels. Parcels for members of the expeditionary forces in the Dardanelles should be wrapped in cotton or some other such fabric. Parcels for the expeditionary forces in France should at least be enclosed in corrugated cardboard, tin or wood. In no circumstances should trail cardboard boxes be used. The address should be written on the cover, preferably more than once. Address tags should not be employed, because they are liable to be torn off and lost. As already stated, the Kingston postmaster fixes December 7th as the last day for sending Christmas mail to the trenches. He points out that delivery before Christmas cannot be guaranteed in respect of mail sent away from this city as late as letter rate, anything up to 16 ounces. But although the letter rate is cheaper for small parcels, it is still preferable to send them by parcel post. This is the case because parcel post mail goes in big wicker hampers, which protect it against damage aboard ship and on the trains. Small packages sent by letter rate are merely put in bags, and run more risk of breakage.
