TO FIX THE PRICES

THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT HAS NOTICES POSTED.

Every Dealer Must Post a List of Prices in His Store, So the Public May Read It.

Paris, Nov. 16.—The Government committee began yesterday posting throughout France the retail prices for every classification of food, in order to prevent overcharging and speculation. The public billboards in Paris bear an order issued by Prefect of Police Laurent, prescribing exactly what shall be charged until the next public notice.

Fifty-four varieties of beef are specified, with prices ranging from the equivalent of 14 cents to 44 cents a pound, the metric pound being one-tenth more than the American pound. The best butter is from 52 to 56 cents a pound, the best eggs 6 cents a piece; potatoes are 4 to 6 cents a pound.

Every retail dealer must post in his store a list of prices so that it can easily be read by the public.

DISEASES OF PLANTS.

A Lecture To Be Given at Queen's University.

The past summer brought to Canadian farmers a magnificent crop, but it also showed them how many plant diseases have established themselves in Canada. The potato crop is so badly diseased in some parts of Ontario that the tubers cannot be saved, but are already rotting rapidly. Oat smut and corn smut were never before so prevalent, while Apple Scab was kept within bounds only by frequent and thorough sprayings. We should study these troubles in some conditions while we have good crops, so that we shall be able to fight such enemies intelligently.

The Dominion Government maintains a body of experts who devote all their time and energy to advancing our knowledge of the best methods of treating the attacks of crop enemies whether animal, bacterial, or the larger fungi. One of these experts—H. T. Gussow, Dominion Botanist, will be in Kingston this week, giving a short course of lectures to the students of Queen's University. His lecture on Wednesday evening will be open to the public, and all who are interested are invited to attend. This lecture will be given in the Medical Laboratory Building, at eight o'clock on Wednesday evening, and the subject will be "The Nature and Importance of Plant Diseases." Lantern slides will be used to illustrate the diseases. Members of the Horticultural Society, of the Vegetable Growers' Association, the teachers of the city schools, and all who have gardens, fruit trees, or shade trees, will have an excellent opportunity of getting valuable information.

A Minister of Munitions.

Toronto Telegram.

The biggest place in the Government at Ottawa is the non-existent place of Minister of Munitions. Sir Robert Borden should hasten to have that place created and choose as his Minister of Munitions a man who can link up the credit of the British Government or the credit of the Canadian banks with the industrial power of every Canadian factory that can produce war munitions. A Minister of Munitions could secure war orders for Canada and arrange credit for the manufacturers who would fill these orders to such an extent that Canada in the next twelve months would be able to produce ten hundred million or twelve hundred million dollars' worth of munitions that will otherwise be produced in the United States. Canada's failure to finance and equip her industries for the production of war supplies is hastening the exhaustion of British credit. Every dollar that is kept in the British Empire is a source of strength to Britain. Every dollar that is sent out of the British Empire is a source of weakness to Britain. Canada would have had a Minister of Munitions in the autumn of 1914 if Sir Robert Borden had not put his trust in a pale and ineffectual Shell Committee. Canada needs a Minister of Munitions to-day.

War Appropriations.

Montreal Herald.

It may be remarked, in passing, that the War Appropriation Act of 1915 made provision for a sum not exceeding $400,000,000 for naval and military operations in or beyond Canada during the year ending March 31st, 1916. Already Mr. White confesses to having borrowed $200,000,000 for this purpose, and he now announces a domestic loan of $50,000,000. Obviously, the sort of thing cannot go without public discussion and public affirmation, else where may we arrive? Mr. White should not forget the truth that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has always emphasized in his speeches to the people, that "You are the masters; I am the servant."

The Grand Trunk Railway announced the appointment of W. S. Cookson as general passenger agent officers at Montreal.

KINGS AND THEIR INCOMES.

The Kaiser Has Suffered a Serious Cut in His "Salary."

According to reliable reports, the war has brought about a decided diminution in the income of the Kaiser. The tearing up of the little "scrap of paper" has already cost him personally $5,000,000. Wilhelm, however, has still a respectable fortune left, if a recent calculation by Herr Martin, an authority on German rich people, is correct. Wilhelm was supposed to be worth $7,000,000, but Herr Martin has pointed out that a trifle of roughly $13,000,000, the valuation of the Kaiser's forest lands and farms, has been overlooked. This brings up the Royal estate to a total of $20,000,000.

The Kaiser, however, has never been the richest monarch in the world. This honor belongs to the Czar, who on his accession came into the Romanoff private estate, yielding about $2,000,000 a year. Beyond that, his salary amounts to another two millions, besides many profitable investments abroad. There are small expenses to be deducted, such as some $500,000 a year to Grand Dukes and Duchesses, but when everything is taken into account the Czar's income is far ahead of that of the Turkish Sultan with his million and a half, or our own King who is the poorest in pelf and palace of all the Old-World potentates. A State grant of $1,500,000, added to his other revenues, brings the Czar's income up to $3,000,000 a year. Out of this he has at least $5,000,000 a year for his private use.

King George receives $470,000 per annum from the State, but little more than a fourth of this goes into the privy purse. It would be naturally impossible for our King to live in a manner befitting his rank on an income of $120,000 or so, but there are miscellaneous revenues from its various sources which help to swell the privy purse.

The Emperor of Austria, who is also King of Hungary, draws two salaries amounting to $562,500 each. The King of Italy receives $750,000 a year, but has to make allowances to several members of the Royal Family out of it. King Alfonso has an allowance of $357,500, a sum which is his own to spend as he pleases. Belgium's King receives about $175,000.

Soldiers' Uniforms.

Experiments have been made in Europe to determine what colour in a soldier's uniform is the least conspicuous to an enemy. Of ten men, two were dressed in light grey uniforms, two in dark grey, two in green, two in dark blue, and two in scarlet. All were then ordered to march off, while a group of officers remained to watch them.

The first to disappear in the landscape was the light grey, and next, surprising as it may seem, the scarlet. Then followed the dark grey, while the dark blue and green remained visible long after all the others had disappeared.

Experiments were also made at blue and red targets, made at the same time, proved that blue could be more easily seen at a distance than red.

Correctly Written.

Jobs was given a form to fill in, and under the heading "Age of father if living," he wrote "105," while under the heading "Age of mother if living" he wrote "102."

"Look here," exclaimed the clerk when Jobs submitted the form, "isn't there some mistake about this?"

"No, sir," was the positive response of the other. "Every bit of it is correct."

"Do you mean to tell me," demanded the amazed clerk, "that your parents are 105 and 102 years old?"

"I haven't got no parents," answered Jobs; "but they would have been that old if living."

Contributory Negligence.

There had been an accident on the worst railroad in the country. The sole survivor of the wreck was sitting up in his hospital cot yawning in his slippers.

"I suppose you're going to sue the company for damages?" said the friend at his bedside.

"No," said the damaged one, "I shall do nothing of the kind."

"What not? You've certainly got a clear case against them."

"Clear case, nothing! Any intelligent jury in the world would bring in a verdict of contributory negligence. I ought to have known better than to travel on the blooming line."

Cleaning Windows.

The easiest way to wash windows during cold weather is to wipe them with a soft cloth or sponge which has been dipped in kerosene; then in a few minutes go over them with tissue paper or soft newspaper and rub off most of the oil and dirt, after which with fresh water give them a good polishing. They will soon be clear and bright.

A Saving Grace.

"What do you think of the two candidates?" asked one elector of another.

"What do I think of them?" was the reply. "Well, when I look at them I'm thankful only one of them can get in."

Surely.

Pat: "Marriage is loike making a call. First, ye go to adore. Secondly, ye ring a bell. Thirdly, ye give your name to a maid."

Mike: "And then ye get taken in."

Safe Bet.

Only one man in every 108 is over six feet tall, and it's dollars no doughnuts that some little six-foot woman can make most of them feel so if they had shrunk in the wash.

BIRDS USED TO ANNOUNCE APPROACH OF AEROPLANES.

Training of Winged Creatures For This Service Not Difficult. Says Writer.

Boston Transcript.

A student of natural history published in the Cologne Gazette an odd article on the use of animals to signify the approach of enemy aeroplanes. The writer, who is evidently quite serious, has noticed that the sight of certain animals is much keener than that of human beings, and comes to the conclusion that birds have the most alert vision, and that bees and pigeons are birds most reliable.

The training of a hen or pigeon to announce the approach of an aeroplane is much easier than one would think. They are to be placed captured in the vicinity of a descending air machine, and as soon as the airman lands he is to rush at the unfortunate fowls and behave them with a rod. This practice is to be repeated until the hen or the pigeon believes its life to be endangered by anything on a large scale descending from the skies. All day long these terrified birds will strain their vision skyward and the remotest speck in the vault of heaven will flutter the doves and heecons as nothing else would.

Another bird which adapts itself to this military service is the common crow. He has most extraordinary eyes, which enable him to see in the back of his head. An object for which a man requires a telescope is easily discovered by the crow without any telescope. Crows are very wise creatures, says the Cologne writer, and once you catch your crow and train him, you will be surprised at the results when the enemy aeroplanes come along.

Soft, Curly, Wavy Hair Now Easy to Have

(Woman's Realm)

Beautiful, fluffy, natural-looking curls or waves, without the use of the rancid curling iron, are now possible for every woman. Yes, not only so, but very easily acquired over-night, and with benefit to the life and health of the hair. It is only necessary to apply a little liquid elmerine before retiring, using a clean tooth brush for the purpose, drawing this down the full length of the tresses from root to tip. In the morning the hair will have a most delightful curliness and lustre, without the least suggestion of grease or stickiness, and will be quite controllable, no matter how the hair is done up.

As liquid elmerine is procurable at any drug store and as a few ounces used up in a month, no woman need put up with that dreary, dank appearance of the hair which gives such an unwholesome look of plainness to most faces.

Tobacco For the Soldiers.

Toronto Mail.

Should the soldiers at the front be supplied with tobacco? The proper answer to this question would seem to be another one—"Do they want it?" Some ladies who have worked zealously to furnish the men with comforts believe that their philanthropy should stop on this side of cigarettes, for they hold that the tobacco habit is a pernicious one, and that it would be doing an ill-service to the soldiers to furnish them with it, or perhaps to tempt them in their way.

A minister of the Gospel here is said to have felt so strongly upon this point that he removed packages of cigarettes which the ladies of his congregation had collected to be sent to France with other little luxuries. It would be equally reasonable to confiscate packages of tea on the ground that tea-drinking is a bad habit, and tends to impair the complexion and shorten life. The point to be borne in mind by those whose consciences are troubled at the thought of soldiers smoking or playing cards in the trenches is that the soldiers are probably better judges of what they want than those who have remained at home. Their commanding officers may be trusted not to permit the men to indulge in any practices that will impair their military efficiency.

This is not a time when petty scruples, however conscientious, should govern our relations with one another, and particularly our relations with our soldiers. It is not a time for the advocacy of fads or prejudices. Our minds should be occupied with the problems growing out of the war. Especially should we leave nothing undone that will contribute to the comfort and healthful enjoyment of the soldiers.

The Russian Government is opening five thousand new savings banks in connection with post offices.

PRIDE HAS PLACE AMONG VIRTUES OF A NATION.

One Country Should Not Fall Before Temptations Placed By Others.

Bertrand Russell in The Atlantic.

Pride has its place among virtues, in the lives of individuals as well as in the lives of nations. Pride, in so far as it is a virtue, is a determination not to be turned aside from the ends which a man thinks good, no matter what outside pressure may be brought to bear upon him.

There is pride in Condorcet, sentenced in writing a book on human progress. There is pride in those who refuse to recant their religious convictions under persecution. Such pride is the noblest form of courage; it shows that self-determination of the will which is the essence of spiritual freedom. But such pride should have as its complement a just conception of what constitutes human welfare, and as its corrective a respect for the freedom of others as absolute as the determination to preserve freedom for ourselves.

Exactly the same kind of pride is good in the life of a nation thinks well of it, let us show our national pride by living without war, without temptations the other nation may put in our way to live according to their ideals rather than according to our own.

Gallipoli—From a Brighter Angle.

Collier's Weekly.

The Germans characterize the British campaign at the Dardanelles as a fiasco, and the British themselves admit that it is a failure, but it is a mistake to base one's conclusions merely upon the obvious facts. The British have lost about 100,000 men in killed and wounded and several warships at the Straits, while doing equal injury to the Turks. It is true they failed to break through, but, as Conan Doyle points out, they have engaged the best part of Turkey's army, which would otherwise have been operating against the British in Egypt, on the Mesopotamian front, or against the Russians in the Caucasus. And although the failure of the Straits enterprise helped to influence Bulgaria to take sides with the Teutons, it drew a big Austro-German army to the Balkans, and thereby reduced their strength in France and Russia.

Gum Arabic.

George Ade, with a fellow-American, was traveling in the Orient and his companion one day fell into a heated argument with an old Arab. Ade's friend complained to him afterwards that although he had spent years in studying Arabic in preparation for this trip, he could not understand a word that the native said.

"Never mind," replied Ade consolingly. "You see the old duffer hasn't a tooth in his head, and he was only talking gum-Arabic."
