Paris, Nov. 24.—Earl Kitchener, the British Secretary of War, in conversation with Greek officials in his recent visit to Athens, is reported to have declared that Great Britain will have four million soldiers under arms and will be in a position to arm and provision six million Russians, and that consequently it would show great stupidity to think the war could end otherwise than in complete defeat for Germany.

(Special to the Whig.) New York, Nov. 24.—A graphic story of the naval battle off the east coast of Trinidad on the morning of August 28th, 1914, was told by Captain Fritz E. Falkenberg, of the steamer Berwind. He told how the German commerce raider, Capt. The Berwind escaped attack, he said, because she was flying the American flag although she was carrying supplies to German warships. Capt. Anti-Treating Laws Will Be Asked For

Toronto, Nov. 24.—The marked decrease in drinking in London, England, as the result of the anti-treating law, has focused attention on the subject in Ontario, and the Provincial Government will be asked by influential authorities, if not to enforce a similar law all round, at least to apply it in the case of soldiers. Complaints have been heard as to the treating of soldiers by civilians, and it is practically certain that the Government will be requested to introduce legislation making such a practice punishable. The difficulties of enforcing such legislation are not being overlooked, but those who have the matter in hand do not think that these are insurmountable.
