LATE LIEUT. WILGRESS

WRITES ABOUT DEATH OF A KINGSTON SOLDIER

Tells How Pte. V. T. Aikens Was Killed—The Kingston Young Man Asked Him To Write Home.

Pte. V. T. Aikens, 28 Patrick street, Kingston, died Oct. 23rd from wounds received at the front in Belgium. It appears from a letter received from the late Lieut. Wilgress, 21st Battalion, to the family, that Aikens was employed just back of the first lines at trench digging, when a German grenade landed in the middle of a group of men. Two of the men were killed and Aikens was wounded in the back, and legs. He was hurried to hospital where he died that night from loss of blood.

Lieut. Wilgress, who himself since met death, stated that Pte. Aikens was one of the best soldiers in his company, and faced death like a brave soldier and never murmured, only asking him to write to his sister. Mr. Aikens was not quite twenty years old. He was buried in a little graveyard in Belgium where so many of Canada's heroes lie.

Lyman MacCallum Writes.

Dr. E. C. D. MacCallum has received the following letter dated Nov. 20th, from his nephew, Lyman MacCallum, Queen's Engineers, who was wounded.

"This is a left-handed letter. I got a bullet across the back of my right fore-arm. It didn't hurt much and nothing was broken. The wound is already nearly healed.

"After two days travel I arrived here at the base hospital in France last night. I had a hot bath and slept between sheets. The nurses are American and Canadian and are very nice. I am still in France but may be sent to England. Really I have had such a good time that I am not the least bit sorry the Germans did get me."

SHUT OFF THE HUNS

OFFICER SPEAKS GALLANT WORK LIEUT. EDWIN BAKER

Took Over Supervision of Trench Work, At a Most Critical Stage—Showed Extreme Courage in His Work.

John Baker, Collins Bay, father of Lieut. Edwin A. Baker, the young Queen's graduate, who lost the sight of both his eyes as a result of doing his "bit" at the front, has received a letter from Major Charles R. Hill, officer commanding "D" Company, 28th Battalion, 2nd Canadian Division, in which particulars are given of the fighting in which Lieut. Baker was engaged. Lieut. Baker is now in hospital in England. The letter was written in the trenches in Belgium, was dated Nov. 14th, and reads as follows:

"As officer commanding "D" Company, of the 28th Battalion, I had occasion to meet Lieut. Baker almost daily, while we were in the trenches, and he was always as cheerful as sunshine. On the night of Oct. 8th, my company was in a salient, close to the German lines when they blew up our trenches with two huge mines.

"This was followed by a fire fight which lasted pretty well throughout the night. Lieut. Baker rushed up to our trenches, as soon as the trouble started, and immediately took over the supervision of the new trench work. This was a serious matter as the ground was in an awful state, and the reconstruction had to be done in dark night. However, your dauntless son tackled the job, with characteristic energy and skill, and before daybreak he had the Huns shut off again.

"Following the explosion we were bombarded for several days by high explosive shells, which did more damage to our trenches, one blowing a big hole in the front. Unfortunately, your son, in the course of his work at night, got to the exploded place and was shot across the eyes as you know. He was brought to my dugout and attended by our doctor, and it would have made your heart swell with pride to see the supreme courage with which he bore pain."

The writer added that Lieut. Baker was quite cheerful and energetically taking up the trench system. "He should get a military cross," he said.

"Shooting Of Dan McGrew." Coming

The first production of the Metro programme which will be seen at the Strand theatre, on Dec. 6th, 7th, and 8th, is the picturization of Robert W. Service's great poem classic, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," with Edmund Breese, the eminent dramatic star, in the leading role. It is a powerful and stirring picture, and more favorable comment than any other rhyme of the Alaskan wilds. Powerfully vivid, and written in red-blooded style, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" is the best work of the American Kipling, Edmund Breese and the company supporting him journeyed to the North-western Canadian woods during the heavy snow season, where all the big out door scenes were staged. "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" is in five parts, and in one of the real big productions of the period.

STUDENTS' VOLUNTEER BAND

Addressed on Friday Afternoon By Mrs. H. A. Lavell.

The Students' Volunteer Band met Friday afternoon at Queen's. Mrs. H. A. Lavell read an interesting paper on "The Broad Culture Demanded of Missionaries." Mrs. Lavell opened her discourse by defining "Culture," apart from the German view, and showed how the missionary must be developed in all lines of culture. She showed that it was not the slow, inert one that was fit for the mission field but the man with the greatest energy. As the heathen, though deficient in Christian knowledge, are very intelligent in their own religion, therefore it requires much power on the part of the missionary to be able to convince them his way is the better. He must show it in experiments such as in agriculture, architecture, and in many other ways. Hence the successful missionary is the one who is clever and versed in all lines of the higher ideals of mankind. Mrs. Lavell gave a very clear idea to those who are pursuing missionary work as to what their aim should be.

Capt. LaRush's Body Found At Wellington

The body of Capt. La Rush, who lost his life when the tug Frank C. Barnes, Toronto, went down near Salmon Point, some few weeks ago, was found on Friday near Wellington. The body will likely be taken to Toronto. The deceased was formerly of Wolfe Island.

It will be remembered that the tug Barnes, which belonged to the Canada Steamship Company, was on her way from Port Dalhousie, to Montreal, when she ran into a terrible gale on the lake and foundered. There were six people on board, but only two bodies have as yet been found, that of Capt. LaRush and the Japanese cook.
