Persian Agriculture. The great arid wastes of Persia would lend one to believe that the ountry does not produce sufficient grain to supply the needs of its population. Such, however, is not the case, and considerable quantities of grain are exported each year. The principal grains grown are wheat, barley and rice. Corn is planted in small quantities, but is used only for roasting ears. Oats and rye are seldom sown. Except along the Caspian coast, Persian agriculture is dependent almost entirely on irrigation. The agricultural implements used in Persia are of the most primitive kind. Plows are made from forks of small trees, with the addition of an iron share. It is stated to be doubtful, however, whether the yield of grain would be greatly increased by using modern plows, as there is no sod and this crude implement seems to stir the soil fairly well.

Wonders of the World. Three groups of "wonders," each containing seven are listed as seven wonders of the ancient world, seven wonders of the middle ages and seven wonders of the modern world. The first group comprises pyramids of Egypt, pharos of Egypt, hanging gardens of Babylon, temple of Diana at Ephesus, statue of Jupiter by Phidias, mausoleum of Artemisia, colossus of Rhodes. The second group comprises the coliseum of Rome, catacombs of Alexandria, Great wall of China, celain tower of Nanking, mosque of St. Sophia. The modern group comprises wireless, telephone, aeroplane, radium, antiseptics and antitoxins, spectrum analysis, X ray.

Mapmaking.

Mapmaking goes back to the earliest known time. It was a branch of the early picture writing practiced by savages. In Tahiti, for instance, the natives were able to make fairly good maps for the guidance of explorers. Maps with raised lines were in use in Peru before the conquest. The oldest known map is that of the Ethiopian gold mines, dating from the time of Sethos L, the father of Rameses II., long before the time of Aristagoras and his bronze tablet, on which were inscribed the circuit of the earth and all the seas and rivers then known.
