Two of the members of "A" Co., started to fight at breakfast one morning and Capt. Grant appeared on the scene. He gave them the option of fighting it out or being confined to barracks. They elected to fight it out and had three rounds with the gloves on. They were satisfied.—Gananoque Reporter.

TEN BODIES MISSING

OF PEOPLE WHO DROWNED IN OR NEAR KINGSTON.

Three Men On Schooner Cheyboyan And Four On Tug Barnes Could Not Be Located—Two Cadets And Sailor Drowned Three Years Ago. Although mariners have kept a close lookout, and from time to time a thorough search has been made, no trace can be found of any more members of the crews of the schooner Cheyboyan, and the tug Barnes, which went down a short time ago on Lake Ontario.

The bodies were recovered from the Cheyboyan, that of Mrs. McDonald, wife of the captain of the schooner, and a sailor who lived at Port Hope, but there are still three missing, those of Capt. McDonald, "Jerry" Lavis, Cobourg, and William Joyner, who lived in Kingston.

Two bodies were received from the tug Barnes, those of Capt. LaRush and a Japanese cook. It was reported that the tug had a crew of six, but no other bodies have been recovered. This means that there are seven bodies which have not been recovered as a result of disasters on the lake this season.

In connection with the recovery of bodies it is recalled that there are three other bodies which have not been recovered, including those of Cadets Logie and Smith, of the Royal Military College, and a young man named Munro, a sailor on the steamer Compton.

The two cadets were dumped out of canoe while making their way from Wolfe Island to the college, in a gale in June 1913, and Compton lost his life when the boat was coming into harbor. He got over the side of the vessel to fix a line and fell in. His home was in Lancaster. Search was made for his body with no success. It is about three years ago since Munro lost his life.

PLAYED "O CANADA"

Kingstonian Writes a Letter From Flanders.

"Jack" Mills, a Kingston boy, writing from Flanders, under date of November 29th, tells of his battalion detouring at a town where they were met by a real Canadian band playing "O Canada." He stated that an Australian transport was in the same town, and added that mechanical transports could not be used in Gallipoli, so they had been sent on there. The writer states that the weather has been quite changeable.

"Up till to-day," he says, "it has been very cold, colder than this time of the year in Canada. To-day it is raining and a little milder."

A HUNTING FATALITY.

A Brother of Aylmer Cavell, of Queen's, Was the Victim.

The result of catching cold, while duck shooting in Alberta, during September, caused the death at Listowel of Sherry W. Cavell, aged twenty-two years, a brother of Aylmer Cavell, attending Queen's University. Prior to his going west, deceased was employed as a clerk in the post office at Listowel. While out hunting he waded out into the water up to his neck to recover some birds which had fallen to his gun. He contracted pneumonia, and for a time was in a hospital at Calgary. He is survived by his parents, three brothers and one sister.

Brig.-Gen. Heneker Wounded.

In the British casualty list of Saturday appears the name of Brig.-Gen. William C. G. Heneker, who graduated at the Royal Military College in 1888, being in the same class with Brig.-Gen. W. B. Lesslie, formerly of Kingston. Gen. Heneker was formerly of the 2nd Battalion, North Stafford Regiment, and was stationed in India when the war broke out.

Made A Settlement.

The officer who while out celebrating on Friday night pulled down the pole in front of David Reid's barber shop, on Brock street, paid over the sum of $5 to cover damages, and there will be no Police Court hearing. Police Constable Earl Jenkins had the case in hand.

Walter Rose, aged ten, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rose, was drowned in West Lake, while skating.
