Washington, Jan. 8.-Rev. Mr. Salisbury, drowned after the torpedoing and sinking of the S.S. Persia, was superintendent for India of the Seventh Day Adventist missions. His mother lives at Battle Creek, Mich., and his brother, W. R. Salisbury, at And Glendale, Cal.

Officials of the Seventh Day Adventist general conference, at its headquarters at Tacoma Park, a suburb of Washington, said that Dr. Salisbury was on his way back to Lucknow, Iudia, his headquarters, where his wife now is after attending a council of the North American division of the conference, held recently in California. He had expected to take a Dutch steamship from London but evidently changed his plans after leaving here. In London he was to have been joined by another Seventh Day Adventist missionary for the trip to India.
