Getting What Want.

'There is satisfaction in havwhat they want," writes one of the world's great merchants. How different from the old order of things. What a contrast to the short sighted storekeeper who is forever endeavoring to sell his customers "something just as good."

.The modern merchant realizes that when a customer asks for a brand there is a reason. You as a purchaser are protecting yourself when you shun the store that habitually substitutes.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result Most thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of autrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, much of the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal, amount of fat. the nutritive processes must be arti-ficially supplied with the power which nature has denied them.
