

YEAR N. 82-326.

KINGSTON, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, JANUARY 22, 1916.

Egypt looms once more as a deciding factor in the great war. Reports state that from 500,000 to 800,000 Turco-Germanic troops are marching upon the same route that Napoleon traversed from Egypt to Palestine. Especially, the entire Suez Canal zone has been turned into a series of fortifications from end to end. Only time will tell who will remain the master of Pharaoh's empire. Photo shows general view of the port of Alexandria, showing British exporting ships from all parts of the world, bringing supplies to their armies.

Egypt looms once more as a deciding factor in the great war. Reports state that from 500,000 to 800,000 Turco-Germanic troops are marching upon the same route that Napoleon traversed from Egypt to Palestine. Great Britain has adequate protection against any attacks. Especially, the entire Suez Canal zone has been turned into a series of strong fortifications from end to end. Only time will tell who will remain the master of Pharaoh's empire. Photo shows fort of Aboukir defending the great harbor Alexandria.

The two guns on board the Italian Liner Giuseppe Verdi set up on the deckhouse over the steering gear of the ship. In spite of the fact that the guns are for defensive purposes only, it is believed that Washington will refuse clearance to the ship. The guns are 9-inch ones, capable of firing twenty-four 75-lb. shots per minute.

Hayti is the scene of another insurrection, which took place on the morning of Jan. 5th, when a force of U. S. Marines were fired on by a party of rebels, one of whom was killed. A marine was injured in the melee. Our photo shows a party of U. S. Marines encamped and barricaded in the court of one of the Government buildings in Port-au-Prince, during a recent rebellion.

FROM THE WESTERN FRONT.
Belgian war-dogs under improvised shelters.

WHERE THE ALLIES GAINED GROUND.
Ruins of a village taken by the Allies in the last big advance, "Somewhere in France." The sandbags in the foreground are part of a German trench.

mills in the United States.

D'Italia.

ed the vessel struck a mine.

saved.

(RT. HON. A. BONAR LAW.