NORWAY FIGHTS DRINK

WHAT THE NORWEGIAN PREMIER HAS TO SAY.

The Government is Determined to Put Down Brandy Drinking—It May Take Years.

London, March 9.—In an interview with an English correspondent cabled here from Christiania, the Norwegian Premier, Gunnar Knudsen, says: "We intend to deal shortly with the drink question—brandy. It will be a hard fight. But we shall win. And our victory will mean much for our country."

"Will the conservatives oppose you?" "Yes—of course! Nevertheless we shall assuredly stop this brandy. It will take a few years. We know that. But we shall stamp out drunkenness. On the whole we are a very sober people. Still, those who are drunken do great harm to themselves and to others. We must stop them. We must grow up. We must improve. We must get rid of bad faults. That is history."

He spoke of housing reform and of developing the resources of the country. "If only we could get rid of war!" he exclaimed. "Was there anything in the dispute which brought about this dreadful war which could not have been settled by arbitration? Nothing. Surely, nothing at all. And think of the waste, the awful waste."

"And you would lead the way, by disbanding your army?" the correspondent asked. "That is what our Socialists say. But we must defend our country. There are too many big robbers about just at present. After the war we may think about it. But one of the great powers must lead the way. Who will it be? Can you tell me? It is a great opportunity for the greatest of the powers. The world wants peace. He who brings it will be the greatest of men."

Force Of Habit.
We gazed pityingly on the listless drug store clerk leaning against the soda counter. "Haven't you any ambition?" we queried, kindly and all that. "No," he replied, with brightening intelligence; "but I have something just as good."—Newburgh Journal.

Helping A Lady.
"Jack, I wish you'd come to see me occasionally." "Why, Vanessa, I thought you were engaged to Algernon Wombat?" "No; but I think I could be if I get up a little brisk competition."

Berlin's Admission.
Berlin, March 10.—French troops have gained a foothold in Fort De Vaux which was captured by the Germans on Tuesday. It was officially admitted this afternoon.

The death occurred in the General Hospital on Thursday of Delbert Munroe, son of Thomas Munroe, of Sharbot Lake, aged thirteen years. Death was due to pleuro-pneumonia. The remains were sent to Sharbot Lake for burial.

D. E. Hughes, president and treasurer of J. L. Nichols Co., Ltd., Toronto, was a visitor to the city on Thursday. Mr. Hughes was at one time a resident of Kingston, and while in the city on Thursday he renewed old acquaintances. Speaking of bitter disappointments—the price of quinine has jumped three cents.

THEATRICAL NEWS

At the Grand.

One of the best pleased audiences of the season witnessed the excellent performance given at the Grand last night. Lon Tellegan, the famous romantic star who for several years was leading man for Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, appeared as the Paramount star in "The Unknown."

It is a picturization of I. A. E. Wylie's novel entitled "The Red Mirage." Besides the cast included, hoodlums Roberts and Dorothy Davenport, two popular screen favorites. Other pictures shown were "Joe Martin Turns 'Em Loose," a very funny two reel comedy; a universal photo-play, "Who Passed By"; the Pathe News and the Paramount Travel Pictures.

The vaudeville included the three Flying Lordons in several new stunts on the flying trapeze and horizontal bars. Frankie Hall has an excellent voice. She sang three songs, for which she was loudly applauded. The same bill will be repeated to-night for the last time.

War Pictures at the Strand.

At the Strand last night a large audience was thrilled by the presentation of the French official war pictures which have created enthusiasm wherever shown. Those who view these pictures see actual warfare on the western front. They first see over 100,000 French troops pass in review before the President of France, the King of Belgium and General Joffre; they see operations in the trenches and the ceaseless firing of the magnificent artillery at the German lines. Armed aeroplanes are seen leaving their base for observation tours and to carry death and destruction behind the enemy lines.

Observation balloons holding up the artillery fire are also viewed. Masses in the forest is an impressive scene. The audience sees how armored motor cars deceive the enemy aviators by making themselves appear just like a row of bushes, forming part of the landscape, bicyclists holding up the makeshift hedge. The work of the Red Cross, beginning at the trenches and ending at the hospital, is fully shown. The burial of the dead is a gruesome picture. The French soldiers are seen cutting off the toes from the dead before they are dropped into the common grave.

The battle of Champagne is very vivid, the German shells falling within 100 feet of the moving picture machines and the parade of 21,000 German prisoners after this battle is very inspiring. Kitchener's visit to the trenches in company with Joffre is highly interesting. The audience enjoys a laugh at the scheme employed by the French to keep the Hun prisoners from running away—cutting off the prisoners' buttons.

The pictures will be shown again to-night and on Saturday. The orchestra music is a feature at the Strand.
