Let's End That Corn!
 Apply a little Blue-jay plaster. That brings a wonderful wax in touch with the corn, and protects it.
 This wax was invented by a chemist who has spent 25 years studying corns.

Tomorrow
 You'll forget the corn. Blue-jay ends all pain. It will prove to you that all corns are needless. You can stop them in an instant—and forever—with a Blue-jay. You will always do that when you know the facts.

Next Day
 The corn will disappear for good. And no soreness follows. Blue-jay has proved that on 70 million corns. It will prove it to you, we promise. After that, you will never keep a corn.

The Occupant of Stall Eight, Stable Eighty-seven, Toronto Exhibition Camp Moved to the Office and the Luxury of Sleeping on a Desk, Top—After That the Turf of France Will be a Picnic, He Says.

HE was a big, stalwart fellow, and proud of being a full private in the Canadian army. He had given up a splendid position in a bank and a comfortable home in order to, as he expressed it, "get into the game." In earlier years he never had found time to go in for the military life because he had worked hard for the promotion in banking that had just come to him. When one thought of his home surroundings, with every element of luxury, it was rather funny to think of him out at Exhibition camp, sleeping in stall eight, stable sixty-seven. He laughed as he told his experiences and insisted that it was the greatest life in the world, says E. Kingsmill-Morgan in Toronto Star Weekly.

The other day we were asking him how things were panning out at the camp and whether the stall had begun to produce nightmares. "Oh, by the way, I've moved from the stall," he laughed. "You know, I've been transferred to the office to fix up some clerical work. Since moving to the office, I've been sleeping on the top of my desk. It has a long, broad top, and I throw a bunch of newspapers on it, roll myself in my blanket, and climb up. What's the use," he went on, "of waiting until we get to the front to encounter hardships? I'm getting ready for any old experiences, and so long as I can get a crack at half a dozen Germans I'll put in any old training. I guess the top of a hardwood desk with no pillow will make the soft turf of France a sort of picnic."

This is the spirit in most of our strong young Canadians, the spirit that is making a name for Canada on the battlefields of Flanders.

He was a quizzical-looking little man who collected fares in a Toronto street car, but somehow he seemed to understand the philosophy of living more accurately than the wrinkled-browed capitalist who flew past in his high-power limousine. The capitalist had a fat purse, which was the result of a curious power of accumulating dollars, while the conductor had only a cheery heart and a curious power of distributing sunshine. It was really an easy matter to decide which man was actually the happier, for the onlooker knows that the facial expression is a very reliable index of the feelings.

More times than one could count the little conductor had brought a smile to the tired face of the downcast worker who was wending his way home, tired of the grind and wondering aimlessly what the whole problem of living meant anyway. And then the bright smile and ready wit brought one to one's senses. His life was surely no joy-ride, and yet there was the invariable smile, whether he was struggling at the back of the car with a wayward trolley pole, or trying vainly to pass a seething mass of strap-holders and at the same time avoid tripping over a dozen protruding feet.

One afternoon recently a Yonge street car left the Queen street corner, and the cheery conductor began to collect fares. Presently a postman entered the car, while the conductor chattered "Shu-ter." Now the long-drawn-out name puzzled the postman because the genial little conductor had, on every other afternoon insisted that "Shu-ter" should be "Shuter-Louisia." He touched the conductor on the arm and said in an agitated voice, "Bill, ye got tired with ye'r voice. What happened to Louisiana?" Quick as a flash the conductor assumed an apologetic tone, and leaning over, said in a suppressed voice, "Louisia's taken the children out for the afternoon."

The garbage man paused beneath the window of the apartment house as he struggled with a box of empty bottles. "Everyone's talking booze," he said to the man that empties the ash cans. "Yes, blame him," cried the ash man, with an oath, "and those big bugs think they'll run our glass of grog."

CHILD'S TONGUE BECOMES COATED IF CONSTIPATED

When cross, feverish and sick give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely. A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeiters sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

What a Four Million Army Means.

Some startling figures were quoted by Mr. Herbert N. Gray in an address in London recently. He said in Britain's little army of 275,000 became 4,000,000 in such quick time that we could not count the men as they came in. Four million soldiers meant one soldier for every acre in Yorkshire, one for every two houses in Great Britain, and thirty-three for every square mile of this island. We had now an army which, marching four abreast, would be 750 miles long. Let every man carry 500 sovereigns, and there we had the army and the cost—army which would reach from Land's End to John o' Groat's. We could stand our army round the coast line, elbows touching, and with every man bearing his own weight of silver we had the cost.

Ants at Work.

A botanist in the far east reports that in Burma and its vicinity the natives set the ants to work. Sandalwood, as everybody knows, is worth its weight in silver, but it is only the hard heart of the wood that is fragrant and valuable. This precious portion is overlaid by a soft and worthless layer, which ants are busy eating out of the trunk of the tree. When a tree is felled and cut into suitable lengths the loggers just let it lie. Then the ants, attracted by the sweetness of the wood, attack the chunks. Within a few weeks the little insects have nibbled their work, and the valuable heart of the wood is freed of its worthless sappy covering, and becomes a valuable article of commerce.—Boys' World.

TRADING X-RAY NURSES.

Big Demand for Specially Trained Women in Britain.

The use of the X-rays is now a recognized aid to both physician and surgeon. Bullets and other foreign bodies are located by these rays; fractures, abnormal conditions of the heart and lungs, and almost all diseases of the internal organs are diagnosed by this same wonderful means. Day by day X-ray work increases in value and importance. No hospital can do without it. At present there is a demand in England for women to take the places of male assistants.

Training for the work of an X-ray nurse must be thorough and should be obtained in a well-equipped and organized X-ray department in a hospital or infirmary where there is a radiographic medical officer in charge. The Great Northern Central Hospital and the West London and Hammersmith give such training, and if the applicant has to wait for a vacancy as student it is a good plan to study osteology (that section of anatomy which treats of the bones) and the theory of radiography.

A knowledge of photography is of the utmost value to a would-be X-ray nurse, for the premium charged for X-ray instruction, which lasts from three months to a year or even longer, varies according to the use to which a student can be put in the department. A knowledge of photography enables a student to begin work at once—developing radiographs, making up solutions, preparing plates, and films for exposure, cleaning dishes, and generally keeping the dark-room in order, and in consequence her premium will be less than that of a woman who knows nothing at all and has everything to learn. The photographic knowledge of an X-ray nurse should also include enlarging and reducing and the making of lantern-slides for lectures on the X-rays.

The working hours are usually 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The salaries for trained X-ray nurses vary from £1 to £2 per week where the sister or nurse lives out, uniform being provided by the hospital, together with dinner, tea, while the salary for an X-ray nurse living in should not be less than £40 per annum with all found. In some cases students have to provide their own uniform and pay for their own washing and meals. Many radiographers in private practice now employ an X-ray nurse, and the salary, on an average, is about £30 a week.

"Oh, I dunno," answered the bottle-man, dubiously, giving the box a kick. "Guess some of us need some one to look after our glass of grog. I've been thinking, boss, we're cursed glad to let the big bugs run us sometimes. If it's to provide cheap amusement, and then make it clean so as the kids and missus can get a little clean fun for a nickel. An' we're also durned glad when the big bugs put wires and get us cheap car fare an' free hand concerts an' play grounds for the kids. I don't know, know the how to do it ourselves, boss, and I guess there's a chance that we don't know how to take care of ourselves sometimes and keep from hitting the booze too hard. I like my glass an' so do you; but, blame it all, it comes hard on Susan and the kids—and on your Dan, just turnin' into a man, and on Mollie, too. Curse it, boss, every man-Jack of us would be better without the rotten stuff, but we ain't got the brains to cut it. Oh, I dunno, I guess, after all, we need lookin' after."

LIBERAL PRESS.

Conditions In The West.

Saskatoon Phoenix.

Whether or how the liquor interest succeeded in buying one or two out of the forty-eight Liberal members of the House in 1915, has to be proven; what is positively known is that the nefarious scheme of the liquor men fell to pieces the moment the Government determinedly put its hand to the plow in 1915 and swept the liquor business out of existence. And no Government in Canada or elsewhere has ever introduced so drastic a temperance measure as a first step, nor acted so promptly and vigorously in the public interest against a powerful and unscrupulous private interest as the Scott Government did in 1915. And only a Liberal Government would have taken the step, for throughout the Dominion to-day the Conservative party is the political bulwark of the liquor interests. In Ontario it is the Liberal Party which stands for thorough temperance reform; in Manitoba and in Alberta it is a Liberal Government which is giving temperance reform and in British Columbia a Conservative Government is blocking all demands for reform.

DIVIDED FRONT SEATS.

New Studebaker Cars Have Many Advantages.

Among the features of the new series 17 Studebaker cars that are attracting the interest of Canadian motorists are the divided front seats on both the four-cylinder and six-cylinder 7-passenger models. According to J. E. Grady, Canadian sales manager, this divided front seat feature has had its effect in the record sales of the series 17 cars, which are the product of the great Studebaker factories in Walkerville, Ont.

Not only are these front seats divided and of the individual type, but they are also adjustable fore and aft. Another advantage is that the seats may be removed if the driver desires, an advantage that is particularly appreciated during the open touring season when many motorists like to camp out in their cars over night.

By reason of the fore and aft adjustment, passengers of any size may be comfortably accommodated in the front seats. The adjustment process is a simple one, requiring only the releasing or tightening of a set screw. Setting the seat its maximum distance to the rear provides seating comfort for the tallest driver, and setting it forward in a convenience for the benefit of drivers of smaller size.

When the seats are removed, it is possible to lay a cot from front to rear for purposes of camping out. On cool summer nights the side curtains may be drawn and ventilation supplied through the double ventilating windshield. On warm nights the curtains are not necessary. Thus, a motorist can get away from sleeping in a stuffy room on warm summer nights, and yet is afforded ample protection on cool nights.

A further use is that, when the front seat next to the driver is removed, the car can be employed to carry bulky articles, such as small wagons or baby carriages, which offer an advantage shrouded in mystery to those who are not familiar with the Suburbanite, particularly find this an advantage.
