Literary Centenaries.

The year 1916 will be a remarkable one for anniversaries. First and foremost is the Shakespeare tercentenary; July 7th will mark the centenary of the death of another of our greatest dramatists, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, who died in the greatest poverty, but was accorded a magnificent funeral in Westminster Abbey. Other literary anniversaries are those of Charlotte Bronte, who was born in 1816, and Thomas Gray, the poet, who first saw the light a century earlier. This year also witnesses the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Philip James Batley, a poet who has always met with the greatest veneration abroad than in his native country.

Should Speak With Authority.

Bishop Frodsham, in his book, "A Bishop's Pleasance," tells a good story against himself.

"One early morning on the quay of a northern port a crowd was waiting for a tender. There were well-dressed people, wharfside laborers, half-sober cane-cutters, and others, including myself.

"A port little child in a high voice asked, 'Mummy, how old is God?' The mother rebuked her child, but a more sympathetic cane-cutter walked solemnly across the quay, laid his hand on the child's arm, and said, pointing to n.e. 'Missie, you ask that bloke in leggings. He's one of the Firm.'

The Difference.

"Pa," asked Willie, "what's the difference between an invalid and a sick person?"

"An invalid, my son," answered Pa, "has money."

John Muir's Great Wealth.—John Muir, who has left a rich legacy to his countrymen, like so many thousands of writers and American idealists, was poor. He was a close friend of Mr. E. H. Harriman, the multimillionaire railroad king. One day Mr. Muir surprised his wealthy friend by saying, "Harriman, you know I am a richer man than you are?"

"Yes?" said Harriman, with a question in his tone.

"Because," continued Muir, "I have all the money I want, and you haven't."—From "American Ideals," by Clayton Sedgwick Cooper.
