PROF. CECIL LAVELL

ARRIVES IN TORONTO WITH WIFE AND BROTHER

Recognized Both of Them—He Is Well, But He Recalls Nothing About Kingston, His Old Home.
Toronto, April 5.—After an absence from Toronto of more than two years, Prof. Cecil F. Lavell returned yesterday, accompanied from Chicago by his wife and his brother, Judge H. A. Lavell, Kingston. Mrs. Lavell was radiant with joy, for her husband had recognized her immediately when he stepped off a Rock Island train in Chicago Monday night. The meeting in the Chicago station between husband and wife and brother was without particular dramatic incident. Stepping from the train with a companion, Prof. Lavell eagerly scanned the great crowd at the busy station. He had been notified that his wife and his brother would meet him, and he was eager to test his memory.
Without an instant's hesitation he walked over to the waiting pair. Husband and wife embraced. There were a few words of greeting and the party left immediately for the Dearborn street station, where they caught the International Limited on the Grand Trunk system for Toronto.

Prof. Lavell retained some general knowledge of Toronto, and his relatives believe that had he entered the city unescorted he would have been able to find his home successfully. The aphasia victim appears to be in perfect health. His memory is slowly improving, and he believes that the years spent in the west have been most beneficial.
During his absence he had continued his studies. He early found that he had retained all knowledge which he had gained from years of study. Only where persons and places were concerned did his memory fail him.
Admittance to the professor was denied newspaper men. The patient is recuperating from the effects of his long trip and relatives would not disturb him. His future plans are indefinite.

Mrs. Lavell is happy.
"Am I glad to get my husband back?" questioned Mrs. Lavell, her face suffused with a delighted smile. "Oh, no, of course not. Why, I'm so happy that I can scarcely bear him out of my sight."
"And he is just the same as he ever was; hasn't changed a bit. I have yet to discover a single old habit he has lost or a new one he has acquired. He came into the house here, and started to smoke his pipe in the same old chair, in the same old corner. He sat down at the piano and played several old selections from memory, just as he used to play them. He enjoys the same kind of reading and remembers all of his history and his sociology."
"My husband is very much interested in his own case. In the west he read every book he could obtain on the subject of aphasia. He is curious to know the experiences of other persons whose cases have been similar to his experience, and is still pursuing the subject."
Mrs. Lavell related how New York city is no more than a name to her husband. Although the Lavells had lived there for some time, the professor recalls nothing of the city or of friends there. He is in a similar predicament when Kingston, the home of his brother, is mentioned. But incidents of his married life he has recalled perfectly and has spoken of them to his wife.
Even relatives and immediate friends were not allowed to see Prof. Lavell.
"I may be wrong in believing that conversation with so many persons will harm him, but until I get expert advice I am not going to take a chance," said his wife. "My first thought must be for my husband."
"I am glad to say that my brother shows indications of making a complete recovery," said Judge Lavell in a conversation. "He looks well

Seventh Son

It is an interesting fact in the history of Prof. Lavell that he is the seventh son in a family of nine boys and three girls, nearly all of whom were born in Kingston. Prof. Lavell is himself a Kingston man, and graduated with honors from Queen's University, where he afterwards became Dean of the Faculty of Education. He is the author of three books, "Italian Art in the Awakening of Art in England," and "The Appreciation of Greek Art," besides many magazine articles, and was at work on a new history when his breakdown occurred. For years previous to his marriage with Miss Kennedy he spent his vacations at Thousand Island Park, where he was exceedingly popular.
An uncle on the mother's side is Dr. Richard Reeve, of this city, who was until recently Dean of the Medical Faculty of the Toronto University, and at one time president of the British Medical Association.
Prof. Lavell is forty-four years of age, and rather slight in build.
Prof. Lavell has been a teetotaler all his life.

Led That Organization

Tyrus Cobb, during his eleven years of service in the American Baseball League, has led that organization in hitting nine times. When he topped the list in 1914 he equaled Wagner's record of eight times leader of the National League hitters. Cobb's batting record in one way is more noteworthy than Wagner's. He has led the American league for nine consecutive seasons. Unlike the other great hitters of the past and present, Cobb failed to get away to a flying start. He broke in at Detroit in 1905, and the best he could hit in the 41 games he played was .240. The following year he finished sixth in the averages, with a mark of .320. In 1907 he established himself at the top, and has never since been dethroned. He was pushed hardest for the honor in 1910, when he just managed to nose out "Larry" Lajoie by a single point. In 1911 "Joe" Jackson, of the Cleveland club, piled up the remarkable average of .408. Under ordinary conditions such an average would win the batting honors, but Ty Cobb is no ordinary player, and that year he recorded his greatest season, batting .420. Cobb has for 10 years batted better than .300, and looms up as the only player at present who has a chance of equalling Wagner's feat of batting better than .300 for 17 years in the majors. In one respect Cobb has exceeded his competitors; twice during his career he has batted better than .400, turning the trick in 1911 and 1912.

"The Canadians saved the position."—Sir John French.
THE most wonderful Canadian battle-painting in existence is reproduced here—a picture which shows with indescribable vividness the terrible conditions in which our gallant soldiers won immortal fame and glory—drawing from Sir John French the remarkable tribute quoted above.
The artist is W. B. Wollen, R.I., a famous battle-painter, and this is his masterpiece. It has special interest in that Lieut. Niven, the sole surviving officer, will be easily recognized in the trenches calling to his men.
Such a soul-stirring picture brings home to all who see it the wonderful pride of race which is theirs. It is a picture which every Canadian must possess, and the owners of the original painting have had it very carefully copied by the most up-to-date process, whereby the artist's colouring is faithfully given, and every detail shown to the fullest advantage. The pictures measure 15 1/4 inches by 22 inches, and are splendidly mounted on a high-grade plate-sunk mount measuring 27 inches by 33 1/4 inches, ready for framing.
