vantage, trimmed with white linen,

Considerable interest in linens is manifested by the leading dressmakers of New York and Paris in their summer collections. A morning frock in blotting pad blue linen is shown here, made attractive by touches of white introduced on the collar and tiny straps finishing the lower part of the sleeves. If desired, the peplum may be omitted, leaving a trim waist finish, with the front extending below the belt. In medium size the dress requires 434 yards 44inch or 534 yards 36-inch linen. The material is folded in half 'n the cutting table, then each section The material is folded in half on the guide, before any attempt is made to cut the dress. If the skirt or sleeves are desired shorter than shown, cut off the pattern on the lines of small "o" perforations.

The piecings for the gores are laid along the selvage edge of the material, so that when the front and back gores are laid on the linen on a lengthwise fold, nearly every available inch of space is taken.

The cutting guide shows the various small sections to be placed into position to avoid waste of linen. The jumper front and back and back of the underblouse are laid on a lengthwise fold, as is also the collar. On the upper row place the underblouse front, sleeve, peplum and round collar, if this is used instead of the straight one, on a leng. wise thread, in the order named. The outerblouse is perforated for two different neck outlines, round or V-shapes, allowing for the introduction of a vest, if desired.
