The Dental Corps.

The record of work done by the Canadian army dental corps in England and France, since its arrival overseas in July last, is a most remarkable one. The first dental clinics were not opened until the fifteenth of July with twelve outfits and the average number of officers on duty that month was fifteen. In the five and a half months to the end of 1915 the total number of operations was 104,474, the average number of dental officers employed 37, the average number of operations performed each month by each officer approximately 525. Lieut.-Colonel J. Alex. Armstrong, director of dental service, who makes his headquarters at Folkestone, writing to an Ottawa friend, says at the present time he has seventy-seven officers at work, and the total number of operations being performed per month is between 35,000 and 40,000, as contrasted with an average of 17,000 in
