A LONG, NARROW SWORD.

Verdun as a Man's Name Appears in Shakespeare.

The name Verdun signifies "a long, narrow sword." Shakespeare mentions the "Lord Verdun of Alton" in Act 4, Scene 7, of the first part of "King Henry VI." where Sir William comes "to know what prisoners thou hast taken and to survey the bodies of the dead." He asks:

Where is the great Alcides of the field,
Valliant Lord Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury?

Created, for his rare success in arms,
Great earl of Washford, Waterford,
and Valence;

Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield,

Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of Alton,

Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Sheffield.

The thrice victorious lord of Falconbridge

Knight of the noble order of St. George,

Worthy St. Michael, and the Golden Fleece,

Great mareschal to Henry the Sixth
Of all his wars within the realm of France?

And to this Shakespeare has the Maid of Orleans respond after this fashion:

Here is silly, stately style, indeed!
The Turk, that two and fifty kingdoms hath,

Writes not so tedious a style as this,
Him, that thou magnifist with all these titles

Stinking and flyblown, lies here at our feet.

Road 1,400 Miles Long.

Search where you will, you will find no highway in the whole world so romantic as the Grand Trunk Road of India.

A stately avenue of three roads in one—the centre of hard metal, the roads on each side ankle-deep in silvery dust—fringed by double rows of trees, it runs for 1,400 miles through the vast northern plain which skirts the Himalayas, from Calcutta to far Peshawar, which keeps sentinel at the gate of Afghanistan.

From horizon to horizon it stretches like a broad white ribbon, as seemingly straight as if traced by a gigantic ruler. And dotted along its entire length are hundreds of serais (wayside rest-houses), each with its arched and turretted gateway, its spacious enclosure—in which humane share shelter with oxen, camels and goats—and its central well of sparkling water.

For 3,000 years the Himalayas have looked down on this road and have seen as they see it to-day, it was the world's greatest highway before Rome was cradled, when the aboriginal Indians drove their cattle over the very spot where the motor-car dashes to-day.

Alexander the Great led his Greeks along it to the conquest of Northern India; and Buddha himself took his daily walks along it centuries before Christ was cradled.

It has seen a hundred generations of men come and go; a score of dynasties rise and fall. And yet to-day it is, to the eye, exactly the same as in the long-gone years when Nineveh was a proud city and our own ancestors gnawed bones in their caves.

The Oldest Treaty.

When he was entertained by the Governor of Madeira on his way to South Africa the late Mr. Chamberlain made the interesting statement that the oldest treaty in the English archives was the first offensive and defensive alliance between Great Britain and Portugal. This may have been quite true, if an earlier one entered into with the Flemings in 1274 had gone astray or was for commercial purposes only, for that was the first English treaty with a foreign country.

The Portuguese treaty was signed at Windsor on May 9th, 1386, largely as a result of the assistance which John of Gaunt gave to John I. of Portugal in repelling the Castilians. Five thousand English troops were sent, and the Allies gained a notable victory at Aljubarrota. The alliance was cemented in 1387 by the marriage of King John to the daughter of John of Gaunt.

Mr. Bonham Carter.

Mr. Maurice Bonham Carter's friendship with the Asquith family dates from his undergraduate days. He got his cricket blue, and in later years has proved a painstaking and capable private secretary to the Prime Minister—a post of no little difficulty. He is almost the youngest in a large family, and has eight or nine brothers, one of whom is a distinguished civil servant in the Sudan; Mr. and Mrs. Bonham Carter, who witnessed their son's marriage, are both over 80.

"His Majesty's Opposition." In his fascinating Reminiscences, which every one is reading just now Lord Revelstoke asks who invented this familiar expression. It is somewhat surprising that one who shows himself to be so well-informed on most matters should not know. The term was coined by Sir John Cam Hobhouse, afterwards Lord Broughton. Canning accepted the appellation as appropriate observing that it should render its inventor's name immortal.

Well Congratulated.

Commodore Tyrwhitt, who commanded the cruisers and destroyers in the recent raid on the German Zeppelin base, commanded the Arethusa when the attack was made on Heligoland Bight in the first month of the war. After that battle he got a telegram of congratulation from 2,081 miners which cost that number of pence.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Sadler, Smith's Falls, announce the engagement of their second eldest daughter, Mabel Margaret, to Thomas Howard McCreary, the marriage to take place on June 30th.

BURIED ALIVE, THESE CANADIANS MADE POOL

Eighteen Hours Underground in Tunnel They Were Digging Themselves.

London, June 23.—Of heroic stories which come out of the third battle of Ypres the coolest certainly is that of the Western Canadian Tunneling Company, who were caught when their own saps had been blown up and they were buried for eighteen hours. They got up a franc sweep-stake among the fifteen to while away the time. The winning slip was to which, the German or the British, would rescue, had no financial interest. Death was the third party to the contract. Lucky drawer of British won.
