FELL AN UNWARY VICTIM TO and 7.30 P.M. THE ZEALOUS HUNTER.

The New Zealand Parrot Dropped Into the Snare in a Simple Way-The Adroit Catcher.

parrot, with all its credit for brains, allows itself to be caught in a very simple manner. In the dusk of the early dawn the Maories, carrying tame kakapos tied to long sticks, set off to hunt. These are the call-birds used to attract by their screams the large flocks of kakapos flying overhead. While one Maori tethers the call-birds by the leg, and sets them screaming to the full extent of their lusty lungs, another cuts as many perches as there are men in the hunting party from the neighboring bush. By means of flax bands these are lashed firmly to different parts of a little hut or whare (in which the hunters secrete themselves), so as to act as perches for the unsuspecting birds. Each perch is so fixed that it can be drawn down into the whare through the roof. On the perches are placed running nooses of flax, and when all is prepared, each Maori sits quietly within the whare with his flax cord in his hand ready to pull at the right moment. The call-birds are then disturbed by means of a long stick, and presently a large flock of parrots, hearing their cries, wheel down and settle with a great chattering in the adjacent trees. One by one they fly and settle on the perches of the whare to hold converse with the call-birds, and when every perch is occupied a Maori gives the signal and the nooses are pulled. The hubbub of screaming and scolding as each perch with its captured parrot is drawn down into the whare can be best imagined. It is only equalled by the frantic excitement of the Maories as t ey grasp the birds by the neck, and throw them aside dead.

Trade-Marks.

The recognition of trade-marks by English law may be said to date only from the beginning of the nineteenth century, but the use of trade-marks was, of course, of far earlier date. So far back as the reign of James I. a certain clothier applied the mark of another clothier to his own inferior goods, but the reports of the lawsuit which ensued leave it doubtful whether the action was brought by the owner of the mark or by an indignant customer, in which latter case it would simply be an ordinary action for fraud.

In 1742 Lord Hardwicke declared that "every particular trader has some particular mark or stamp." At the same time his lordship refused to grant the protection of the law to the "Great Mogul" stamp on cards. He was apparently under the impression that the legal recognition of kingsion trade-marks meant the creation of a kingsion new kind of monopoly, and he made up his mind to obviate such possibility.

Lord Eldon, on the other hand, repeatedly granted injunctions to restrain one trader from fraudulently "passing off" his goods as those of another, and thus helped to lay a foundation on which the present trade-mark law has been built up in successive stages.

In very early times the use of sugar appears to have been unknown. The sweet sap of the Indian reed seems to have been first cultivated in the country extending from Cochin-China to Bengal. 18th-Century Prize Money.

Prize money now is a trifle compared with what fell to lucky crews in the palmy days of the eighteenth century. After the capture of the single Spanish ship Hermione in 1762 by the Active and Favorite the rearadmiral and commodore, who had even been present, received between them £64,963 3s 9d. Of the Active's crew, Captain Sawyer got £65,053 13s 9d, three commissioned officers each £13,004 14s 1d, eight warrant officers each £4,336 3s 2d, 20 petty officers each £1,806 10s 10d and 150 seamen and marines each £485 5s 4d—total, £251,020 12s. The Favorite's share was £208,181 4s 3d. Twenty wagons triumphantly brought the treasure from Portsmouth to London.-London Chron-

Kitchener and Titles.

It is a long time since a dukedom was conferred, and, in spite of rumors to the contrary, it is possible that at the close of the war there won't be any more created, for the Earl of Derby is credited with the intention to refuse one, and Lord Kitchener thought it absurd to give titles to a man who has no one to succeed him.
