STEACY'S

For all Complexion Ills

If the skin be colorless, sallow, muddy, over-red, blotchy, or freckled, nothing will so surely overcome the condition as ordinary mercurized wax. It literally takes off a bad complexion — absorbs the dead and near-dead particles of surface skin, gently, gradually, causing no inconvenience at all. A new complexion is then in evidence, clear, spotless, delicately soft and beautiful. One ounce of this wax, procurable at any drug store, will rejuvenate even the worst complexion. It is used like cold cream.

Correspondence invited.

WAR BULLETINS.

Since the offensive began the British have taken eight miles of German trenches and 7,500 German prisoners with many guns. Russian guns are pounding at the German forts of Kovel; Teutons are unable to stop the Russian advance at any point. Three hundred thousand Austro-Germans have been made prisoners on both fronts in the last six weeks. Night was calm on both banks of the Somme on Tuesday night, dealing with the Anglo-French offensive.

MAY BE SENT TO CANADA.

Plan for Emigration of England's War Widows. London, July 12.—Women outnumbered by more than 1,250,000 in the British Isles, while in some of the Empire's overseas dominions men are in a large majority. To redistribute these women, who are war widows, when the conflict is over, the Salvation Army has a scheme to send them to the dominions to re-marry, and is raising a fund of $1,000,000 to defray the expense of their emigration and that of their children. It is estimated that the cost of emigration would average about $75 for a single woman and $200 for a family of three, and that by means of the $1,000,000 fund at least 35,000 widows, with 10,000 children, could be emigrated.

Billiousness is cured by HOOD'S PILLS 25c.

A REFORM EDICT.

Must Stop Parading or Lengthen Dress. Atlantic City, N.J., July 12.—Summer maids must stop parading the beach in chorus girl aquatic costumes. This was the order handed down, the first reform edict of the season, and now the mackintosh man is saving the modesty of the conservative.

Daily processions of pretty girls in abbreviated "sun" attire have been topped, and blushing cogs have been serving as sensors of beach reform. Coming from the Department of Public Safety, the order is regarded as sinister.

RESCUED BY ENEMY.

Festival of Montreal Had a Queer Experience at Ypres. A young Montreal soldier, Fournival, who had the experience, after being wounded, of being carried out of the zone of fire by a German, has just arrived here. Fournival, who lives in Chaboullie Square, enlisted in the Montreal Grenadiers, but eventually was transferred to a certain battalion belonging to the city which has been in most of the fighting.

Fournival went to France with the first Canadians, and was wounded in March of last year and laid aside for four weeks. He went through Feutbert and two battles of Ypres, and has now in the same deadly neighborhood received shrapnel wounds in the thigh which will put him out of action for some time to come.

Fournival was attached to a trench mortar party at the time the Canadians made their counter-attack by which they recovered the ground temporarily lost to the Germans.

"Our party," he says, "advanced with the battalion. When we had got some way, with every sort of fire playing round us, we had to go back because we had no more ammunition. The battalion, however, were all right when we stopped for the time being. They went on just as before, losing men all the time, but still kept going on.

"When we were ready to go forward again the battalion had got far in front. We went after them, and came across a good many Germans who had been left behind in our men's rush. Our chaps had just swept over them. I matters were so exciting that neither German nor Canadian thought of taking cover from the shrapnel fire, which was intense.

"I got hit in the foot, but took no notice of it, and went on for a time. Soon, though, I was obliged to drop, because I could not keep up with the others. I lay for a while, but then began to crawl back. A German, a big fellow, who was just wandering round, with shells dropping everywhere, saw me, and picked me up on his back, and began going to the rear with me, looking for a dressing station. He carried me easily enough. While we were going along I was hit again with a fragment of shrapnel in the same leg. My German was not touched. He spoke English well, and told me he was working in London, England, before the war. He got me to a dressing station, where I was at once attended to.

"My German walked around. I was just going to shake hands with him when one of our chaps said: 'None of that!' I lost sight of him directly after. I suppose he would be taken along with the other prisoners. Nearly all the Germans I saw spoke English well, better than you hear me speak it, although I have lived in Montreal many years."

Goulding's Scrapbook.

Eight years ago George Goulding, one of Ontario's best-liked athletes, was unknown to the sporting writers; now he holds every world's walking record that he has gone after, and every fellow of athletics has his career "down pat."

Before he broke into the walking game he liked to do a little long-distance running, and incidentally got his name in the papers once in a while. He kept these clippings, and decided to get a scrap-book for them. When he got to the stationer's shop, however, he found that prices for good scrap-books were rather high. But the shopkeeper was a good-natured old man, and pulling down a massive volume, he said, "I'll tell you what I'll do; I've had this book on my hands for several years, but if you'll take it I'll give it to you at a rare bargain."

George was a little "hard-up" at the time, so he took the book. After he had filled a few pages he took it down to show to his employer. The "boss" looked it over a while, and then he said, "Well, George, when you get this book filled up I will think you really are an athlete."

Now Goulding has the book brim-full of newspaper accounts of his achievements, and has enough more to fill two or three more books.

Compliment to Foster.

Lord Northcliffe paid a neat compliment to Hon. Sir George Foster recently at an Australian dinner in London in honor of Premier Hughes of Australia. In supporting the principal toast, Lord Northcliffe said he did not know why a plain man should not speak frankly of those assembled at the table, and that probably had among them were the five best orators of the British Empire, namely, Lord Rosebery; that most eloquent of all Canadians, Sir George E. Foster; Lord Grey, Colonel Winston Churchill, and Premier Hughes of Australia.

Reynolds Newspaper, in an open letter extending a welcome to Sir George Foster, credits the Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce with a magnetic personality, great vision, and high ideals, combined with practical experience as a man of affairs.

A Gift of Tobacco.

A generous contribution of 4,000 pounds of Virginia tobacco, donated by Mr. Henry Anderson of the War Relief Association of Virginia, U. S. A., through the kind office of Lady Williams-Taylor of Montreal, is gratefully acknowledged by the Militia Department. The tobacco is now being distributed to the troops in England and at the front.

The generous gift proves the warm sympathy entertained by the American donors for the Canadian soldiers. Lady Williams-Taylor has taken the most active part in the organizations looking after the care and comfort of the Canadian soldiers, and it was through her instrumentality that this two tons of tobacco was proffered by Mr. Anderson.

A boy's mother has to teach him to say his prayers but he can learn to swear of his own accord. We admit that we are superstitious, but not to the extent of preferring twelve dollars to thirteen.

FINEST IN THE EMPIRE

FIVE THOUSAND MEN ARE TRAINING AT PETEWAHA.

Canada's Artillery Camp is Now in Active Operation and is the Scene of the Most Thorough and Strict Training—Concentration of Batteries is the New Method in Modern Warfare.

CANADA'S great artillery school this year is at Petawawa. Men and youths of all ranks, and of all stations of life who have elected to serve their country in the big ordnance departments of the Canadian Expeditionary Force have been sent from all artillery depots in the Dominion to this camp for complete training—a training that is something new in the development of an active service army. Heretofore it has been the practice to train individual batteries at depots for early transference overseas where the syllabus is complete and the actual. As a result of lessons learned at the front of the complete dependence upon artillery preparations for offensive measures by the infantry, the artillery is trained en masse, because in Europe the artillery will have to work in greater bodies than even brigades, in order to make any pronounced impression upon the modern German ordnance. The idea of making the training as complete as possible in all the details of its work on Canadian soil before transference overseas also played a great part in the decision of the Minister of Militia to have all the artillery of the Dominion concentrated in one camp.

Amid the scenic wonders of the Laurentians and the late-dotted Ottawa River, the camp is enchantingly situated. On high ground on the south shore of the river, and planted on the wooded hillocks of the plateau, the camp proper, with all the permanent and fully-equipped administration and supply offices, is ideally situated. No lengthy camp life wearys the eye, because they are hidden away among the trees, where the weary soldier, after many a hard day's toil in a broiling sun, may repair for a night's restful repose instead of suffering in a sometimes super-heated tent exposed to all the vagaries of the elements.

Winding lanes, neatly fenced, laid out as though to please a landscape gardener rather than the precise military mind, add touches of beauty and picturesqueness to the camp. Unless the visitor is given a guide he will experience difficulty in reaching his destination. Camp engineers have labored in these wilds against ruthless nature. Modern macadamized roads that would put many provincial cities and towns to shame, spread like spider's web across through, and round about the camp. At the entrance, over the Petawawa River, a huge new concrete viaduct has been erected which enables the artillerymen to draw their heavy guns into the camp on a level road, rather than perform the hitherto almost impossible task of carrying them down and up the steep banks of this raging torrent. For this improvement the troopers offer up their sincere thanks.

During the past few weeks many wonders in camp development have been worked, and it is claimed that no camp, not even some of the British permanent camps excel it. During these days 9,000 men have moved in. The first brigade to arrive was the 13th, from Military District No. 3 (Ontario), with headquarters at Kingston. This brigade includes the 50th, 51th, 52nd, and 53rd Batteries. Then followed the other brigades: the 12th, from Military District No. 2 (Ontario), which includes the 47th Battery from Hamilton, the 48th from Toronto, the 49th from St. Catharines, and the 54th from Brantford. The 14th Brigade includes the 55th and 56th Batteries of Guelph, the 57th Battery of Quebec, and the 66th Depot Battery of Montreal. The 15th Brigade comes from extreme east and west. It includes the 58th Battery of Fredericton, N.B., the 59th Battery of Winnipeg, the 60th of Regina, Sask., the 61st of Lethbridge, Alberta, and the 62nd of Victoria, B.C. The 4th Divisional Ammunition Column includes units from Montreal, Halifax, and Kingston.

Every university in the Dominion is represented in these units, as are most of the trades and professions. Men that have held lectureships in the seats of learning, others who had embarked upon promising careers in the professions, many who had entered the large financial institutions, etc.—they have given up all to follow the very cross. Commissions they spurned, preferring the rough and ready life of the rank and file so long as they were doing their duty.

Dominated by the passion to get into the game and bring it to a proper issue with all possible speed, the men, under the capable guidance of their no less interested officers, have surprised older military men by their exceptional adaptability to the rigid requirements of the new business. After eighteen days together, these men, by their exploits on the parade ground, their work at the guns and at drill, have become the pride of the district commanders, and have earned merited applause from the Governor-General, H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, who has passed through the artillery school himself and knows what it means. Men who a few weeks ago knew practically nothing of soldiering and its requirements are to-day experts in military exercises, gun-laying, signalling, telegraphic work, and all the intricate requirements of a modern artillery battery. Their capabilities in this regard have been tested by experts, who declare the achievements of these embryo soldiers to be "excellent."

A leap year girl who proposed in vain to half a dozen men says there isn't much difference in them — but a lot of indifference. Woman's sphere seems to be the earth.
