

Conservative Clothes

Many men, possibly including yourself, prefer the more conservative and kind-you-are-used-to models in suits. Such suits are the back-bone of our business. They practically sell themselves! And because they are "willing horses" so to speak, we don't often take a whack at them in the newspapers. However, the point is, that should this be the sort of suit you want, we're sure that we can satisfy you because we have a fine showing of these modest garments, at

THEATRICAL NEWS

At the Grand.

The offering of the Grand Opera House is presenting its patrons for this half of the week excels all preceding attempts to please local lovers of clean entertainment. Last night Mack and Redding made a hit with some excellent comedy. They introduced the following songs: "Arkansaw," "Dixieland," "Da, Double D, Y," and "Where the Red Roses Grow." Miss Redding wore some stunning costumes that were both novel and in idea. Turno, the boy with the diamond crutch, did some good juggling, and some novel dancing with his one leg. John Barrymore appeared in "The Red Widow," and in this thoroughly amusing photo-production kept the audience in an uproar from the beginning to end. "The Idols of Clay," a three-reel photoplay, and a one-reel comedy, "His Picture," were splendid pictures. The Paramount Topical Budget contained many events of national interest. This same programme will be repeated to-night.

"Chaplin" At The Strand.

It is always the case wherever Charlie Chaplin is shown, no matter what the weather conditions may be the people are bound to see Charlie. Last evening a large and highly pleased audience attended the Strand and saw Charlie Chaplin in his latest Essany release, "The Bank" which was shown here for the first time. It is a scream from start to finish. A five-act drama, "The Moral Fabric," featuring Frank Mills and Edith Stevens also pleased immensely, while a two-reel Keystone comedy and other good reels completed a first-class bill. The many patrons of the Strand are more than pleased at the coolness of the Theatre, which the management claim is cooler inside than out. The same bill will be repeated to-night and to-morrow.

At Griffin's.

"The Flash of An Emerald" was received last night by quite an audience in spite of the war. Some of the comments heard were very favorable, especially regarding the scenes and settings, which include a view of the procession to the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre, in Canada, taken especially for this production. "The Flash of An Emerald" will be shown again this evening at Griffin's Theatre.

Lake Ontario Park.

The big attraction announced for Lake Ontario Park last evening drew a large crowd. Six special cars were required to convey the people. The programme was enthusiastically received. Frank L. Perry, comedian, sang in a comic vein "Another One," "Case of Disappointment," "Across Her Knee" and engaged in talking, dancing and playing on the violin an old country dance; he stepped out lively to his own music. He is a lively comedian. J. Livingston, with a baritone voice of unusual merit, also an impetuous, rendered an English song, "Reggie," "When I Lost You," "Peculiar Walks of People," and gave a special character song, imitating a lady soprano, an Italian peanut vendor, and a Jew selling wares. He was the recipient of much applause. The pictures were excellent, particularly "The Grinning Skull," a three-reel one; a comedy number, "Telegraphic Scandal," and the Pathe News, a series of remarkably interesting views. Wedding day will be children's one-act day on the cars, with matinee at 2.30 p.m.

The defendants were allowed a set-off of $1,500 and $100 for costs. The action has been before the Appellate Division three times and before the Supreme Court of Canada twice. The company sued Moore, their former managing director, for monies and lands wrongfully taken by him from the company. Moore counter-claimed for about $75,000. The final result was an abeyance. A. MAY HAVE BEEN CARRIED OFF. Transportation Officials Anxious About a Clerk.

When the day clerk at Swift's wharf went down to work this morning he found that the night clerk, F. Bricehand, was not there, and had not been for a short time. E. E. Hersey was informed, and he at once made efforts to locate the man. It was thought for a time that he might have gone over to his home on Wolfe Island, but it was found that such was not the case.

The most logical conclusion is that the man got on the steamer which goes down the river about five o'clock in the morning. That he was at work when the boat came in is proved by the fact that he signed one of the bills. The night before he had been told to place some napkins on the boat. It is thought that possibly he forgot until just about the time the boat was leaving and then went aboard to hand them to the steward. Then when he returned to get off the boat he might have found it some distance from shore. As he would be stopping work in a very few minutes probably he decided that it would be alright to take the trip down the river and enjoy the balmy breezes of a sunny summer's day, and return this afternoon ready to go on duty shortly after the boat arrives. This is the conclusion to which the officials of the lines have reached.
