CANANOQUE TAKES STEPS

TOWARDS NEW ROAD FROM BELLEVILLE TO PRESCOTT.

Invites Representatives of Municipalities From Belleville to Prescott to Meet in Gananoque on August 16th.

(From our own correspondent) Gananoque, Aug. 3.—At a special meeting of the Board of Trade held on Tuesday evening the president brought up the matter of permanent roads similar to the Ottawa-Prescott new road. The advantages of such a road to the towns and municipalities between Belleville and Prescott would be incalculable, and after discussion the following resolution was moved by Mayor O'Connor and seconded by M. McParland:

"That the Gananoque Board of Trade invite deputations from the cities of Belleville, Brockville and Kingston, as well as from the towns of Napanee and Prescott, and the Reeves of the municipalities on the highway between Belleville and Prescott to meet in Gananoque on Wednesday, August 16th, to discuss the advisability of joint action in securing a permanent road on the highway above mentioned, and that the Provincial Government be requested to have their chief engineer attend this meeting, and that the press be also invited to be present."

The suggestion was offered that it would be a good scheme to arrange at this meeting for a tour of Northern New York State, say, from Ogdensburg to Syracuse, thereby enabling the members of this proposed organization to see the advantages and comfort afforded by the state roads across the border.

Letters To The Editor

No One Compelled to Serve.

Kingston, Aug. 3.—(To the Editor): Would you kindly publish in your paper the list of those who are exempt from military enlistment in Canada.—Citizen.

There is no military compulsion in Canada. No man is compelled to serve.

HOW GEN. BRUSILOFF DOES HIS WORK.

London Mail. Never before, I believe, has an army taken prisoners to the number of twice its own strength. General Brusiloff's army averaged about 180,000. It never exceeded 200,000. At times it dropped as low as 100,000. He captured in all 260,000 Germans and Austrians, with 400 guns. "And how many machine guns?" I asked him. "I forget. Thousands," he replied.

His success he attributes to the courage of his troops and to the policy which he followed of never giving the enemy any rest. "The best strategy and the most successful tactics lie in attack," he told me. "Don't let the enemy choose where he will hit you. Hit him first; keep on hitting him. Give him no rest; the general's close-cropped, stubby hair seemed to bristle as he spoke. His longish but thin and little-noticed grey moustache quivered. "Yes, that is the way. Always attack. Even if he is stronger, attack him. Keep him guessing. Puzzle him. Make him wonder what you are up to."

"But that means heavy losses." "No, no, not if your attack succeeds. Attacks which fail, like the German attacks at Verdun, are terribly expensive. But successful attacks cost very little. If only we had had munitions this time last year. He shook his head regretfully. He half-closed his eyes. He could see again the dim vista of the plains of Hungary, upon which he looked down from the Carpathian crests. He was thinking of what might have been. "But men of action do not give way to futile regret. "Now it is different," he said briskly. "We have abundance of everything, as you have seen for yourself. We are ready, and we shall be very glad when we get orders to prove it."

THE CHANGE IN TWO SHORT YEARS.

Syracuse Post-Standard. France's first preparation for the war was to move four army corps to the border. Four army corps! How many army corps had choked up shell-craters and gone down like Napoleon's cavalry in the sunken road at Waterloo since that time?

"Great Britain voted to equip 500,000 men and passed a war budget of $500,000,000. Since then Kitchener has built an army six times the size of this first handful, and $500,000,000 pays the cost of the war for little more than a week. We are surfeited with war. We are contemptuous of figures which have grown so great that they mean nothing—but figures. All sense of the individual has been lost. Has two years of the war made us more callous to individual suffering? Hardly that. But it has changed our outlook. The only news to-day which could create the same intense thrill of those first days of the war would be the news of peace.

Constable Thomas Mullinger arrested a man named Frederick Stalker on Thursday afternoon on a warrant charging him with careless driving of an automobile several days ago, as a result of which Corporal C. Gunn, of the 155th Battalion, was injured. Gunn had his right ankle sprained. The case will likely be heard on Monday next.

Wotherspoon, who has been adjutant of the School of Infantry at Kingston and Barriefield camp for the past year, has been appointed staff adjutant of the Royal Military College, which position was last occupied by the present commanding officer, Lieut.-Col. C. N. Perreau. Capt. Wotherspoon belongs to Port Hope.

TO THE DISTANT ONE.

[Francis Ledwidge, the brilliant young Irish poet whom Lord Dunsany discovered some months ago, is at war, a Lance-Corporal in the 5th Battalion of the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers. This poem is taken from the London Spectator.]

Through wild byways I come to you, my love, Nor ask of those I meet the surest way: What way I turn I cannot go astray And miss you in my life. Tho' Fate may prove a tardy guide, she will not make delay, Leading through strange seas and distant lands, I'm coming still, tho' slowly, to your hand. We'll meet one day.

There is so much to do, so little done In my life's space that I perforce did leave Love at the moonlit trysting-place to grieve. Till fame and other little things were won, Much have I lost that I shall not retrieve, Far shall I wander yet with much to do, Much I shall spurn before I yet meet you, So fair I can't deceive.

Your name is in the whisper of the breeze Like Beauty calling for a Poet's song To one whose harp has suffered many wrongs. In the lean hands of Pain. But when the broods Of flower-eyes waken all the streams along, In tender whiles, I feel most near to you. Oh, when we meet there shall be sun and blue, Strong as the spring is strong.

Victrolas for Soldiers

Major Gill has presented the 156th Battalion with five Victrolas and corresponding records which the boys are enjoying immensely and any one would suppose who might pass along the lines and hear Harry Lauder or Will Oakland, Albert Campbell, Henry Burr, or some other of the ilk whose voices are turned out from the regular discs of the machine, and the only regret concerning the gift is that there were not ten presented instead of five. The machines are good ones and will not doubt go to the trenches.

To-Become Aviators

Two officers of the 156th Leeds and Grenville Battalion, who have been carried as supernumeraries of "C" Company, have been struck off the strength of the unit, in order that they may take up a course in aviation preparatory to entering the Royal Naval Air Service as flight sub-lieutenants. They are Lieut. Henry Augustus Coon, of Eglon, and Lieutenant Watson Ward Pitts. Lieut. Coon is a son of Capt. D. A. Coon, M.D., Kingston, now of the Army Medical Corps.
