METHODISTS HELD SERVICE

COMMEMORATED SECOND ANNIVERSARY OF THE WAR.

Addresses Were Delivered by Capt. Kidd and Rev. J. D. Ellis—Latter Thanked God England Had Not Been Prepared.

The Methodists of the city held a union service in Sydenham Street Methodist Church Friday evening to commemorate the second anniversary of the war. There was a good congregation present, and the service was impressive and inspiring. Rev. Alfred Brown, pastor of Sydenham Street Church, presided, and he was assisted in the service by Rev. J. D. Ellis, pastor of Queen street Church, and by Rev. A. W. Stewart of Battersea, representing Princess Street, he having exchanged work for the summer with the pastor, Rev. H. E. Curry. Practical stimulating addresses were delivered by Capt. T. A. Kidd, A.A.D.C., Battersea Camp staff, and by Rev. Mr. Ellis, who took the place of Capt. Hagar, who was to have addressed the meeting, but who did not make an appearance.

Capt. Kidd.
Capt. Kidd, who went overseas with the first contingent, spoke highly of the way in which Kingstons had acquitted themselves in the early days of the war. He made special reference to the Second Battalion, but declared that in all branches of the service the soldiers from the historic Limestone City had acquitted themselves like heroes.

If, continued the speaker, the war was to be brought to a speedy and successful conclusion, three things were needed. Men, money and munitions. More men were urgently needed. Wherever it was possible for parents to spare sons, for sisters to spare brothers, for wives to spare husbands, the sacrifice should be made. If it was impossible for a family to give any of its made members to the cause, then that family should contribute generously to the financial schemes of the war. In the third place, there were many men who while medically unfit to stand the rigors of warfare were well and strong enough to make munitions, and they should willingly help with this important work.

Obstacles to Recruiting.

The speaker said that one of the chief obstacles in the path of the recruiting officer was lack of encouragement at home. Many parents discouraged their sons from enlisting. He told of one father who promised his son an auto if he wouldn't enlist. Many employers, too, were discouraging their employees from enlisting. It would be the young men, and not their parents, who would have to answer the question, when asked, "did you do your 'bit' in the great war?" Furthermore, the young men of to-day and not their parents, would bear the burdens created by the war. For these reasons parents should not discourage their sons from enlisting.

The speaker concluded by urging those present to give men, if possible, but if this was impossible, to give money.

Rev. Mr. Ellis.

Rev. Mr. Ellis declared that naturally he was filled with the spirit of war, as he had just come in from the country, where he was holidaying, to get his son ready to go overseas. His son, he said, had been granted an aviator's certificate last Saturday, had received his commission on Wednesday, and would sail in a very few days for England. Continuing, the speaker said they had cause for much gratitude because England was fighting for high ideals, the ideals of the twentieth century, while Germany was fighting for the ideals of the fifteenth century. England was fighting for national liberty, which would give to every nation, no matter how small, the right to govern itself. For half a century Germany had been preparing for this war. England, however, had not been prepared, and he thanked God that she had not. But she was not foolishly unprepared. She was prepared for defence. She had a strong and invincible navy. But she had not prepared herself to fight the foe on alien territory and this was to her everlasting credit.

Allies Were Succeeding.

Then the success which was crowning the Allies' combined efforts was a matter for gratitude. Germany was now surrounded by a ring of iron. The Germans were beaten, and it was only a question of their admitting they were beaten. The speaker referred to the great part England and her colonies were taking in the struggle, and rejoiced at the thought that while England was unprepared when war was declared her verility was such that she was able to fully to prepare herself and was now ready to wage a victorious conflict. In conclusion, the speaker referred to the power of prayer, which was able to link the mighty Unseen Powers with the Allies and enable the high ideals for which England was fighting to triumph. A choir composed of singers of the different Methodist choirs led the singing. "The Lord of the Nations" was effectively rendered by Messrs. W. Mack, N. Armstrong, Harold Angrove and J. Harvey.

OBITUARY
Late Mrs. Samuel Hyland.
On Friday the death occurred of Amelia Cynthia Campbell, wife of Samuel Hyland, 427 Alfred street. The deceased had been ill for some time, and her condition became worse until she passed away on Friday. The late Mrs. Hyland was born in Inverary sixty-two years ago, the daughter of the late James Campbell, but had been a resident of this city for a number of years.

(See also Page 13.)

Having joined the Queen's Field Ambulance at Kingston, Robert Newell, Perth, left to report for duty at Barriefield. He has been on the office staff of the H. K. Wampole Company for over a year, and on Saturday as a token of remembrance the staff presented him with a splendid wristlet watch.

Lieut. Carnsworth, 166th Battalion, has returned from London.

Capt. Thorne, commanding Special Service Battalion, has returned from Lindsay.

Lieut. Guy Bowie, 154th Battalion, was in Ottawa on Friday.

W. Winton, of National Council staff, was in camp today on business.

Mrs. Wilson leaves today to visit her mother in Pennsylvania.

An order has been issued from headquarters that nineteen subalterns are to be chosen as a draft to go overseas shortly. Three weeks ago it was announced that the signalling and transport officers and the assistant adjutant of each battalion were to be dropped. These surplus officers and some others will make up the draft of nineteen.

Sergt. Roy Gibson, 146th Battalion, arrived on Friday from Valcartier on his last leave before the battalion goes overseas.

Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown, G. S. O., left on Friday for Ottawa to make an inspection of the 207th and 230th Battalions there.

Capt. O'Leary, recruiting officer for the batteries at the camp, is expected to bring in a large number of recruits on Tuesday from Ottawa.

THEATRICAL NEWS

At the Grand.

An excellent bill has been secured for the first three days of next week at the Grand Opera House. The programme includes the beautiful and enchanting Hazel Dawn in "The Feud Girl," a unique Famous Players' production, and a stirring tale of the warring clans and conflicting loves between a man and a maid of the opposite factions. A two reel Universal photoplay, a comedy, and the Paramount Topical Budget will complete the picture programme. The vaudeville will consist of two high-class acts of the better type of variety entertainment.

At the Strand.

Mabel Taliaferro, the bewitching young Metro star, will be seen on the screen here at the Strand Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in "Her Great Price," a five part Metro wonderplay. Miss Taliaferro is surrounded by an exceptionally strong cast. Other good subjects will also be shown.

Lake Ontario Park.

The management of Lake Ontario Park is making arrangements for a very elaborate programme of events on Monday evening and all next week. In the vaudeville Miss Catharine Hart will render some of her choicest songs, and Mile Gabriel, an acrobat, who is recommended as an expert in her work, will be on the list. There will be also some 3,000 feet of interesting moving pictures.

SUMMER SCHOOL LECTURE

Given on Friday Afternoon By Prof. J. F. Macdonald.

In a very interesting and instructive address on Friday afternoon to the students attending the summer session of Queen's University, Prof. J. F. Macdonald presented the claims of the poetry of John Massfield upon the literary student of to-day. The lecture was given in the physics lecture room, and was well attended by members of the school and outsiders. The speaker before dwelling on the poetry of John Massfield, gave a short account of his life, his aims, and the effect of his poetry. Then choosing suitable extracts from the longer poems of the writer he explained the structure of the lines and the complete poem. Many extracts were read from his writings and their beauty and charm was shown.

Prof. Macdonald read some of the shorter poems and ballads of the poet, and throughout carefully explained the ideas and thoughts of the writer as evidenced by his poems. The lecture was greatly enjoyed by the audience.
