BRITISH TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYED

By a German Submarine—Swedish Cruiser Sinks a German Submarine.

London, Aug. 15.—The British torpedo boat destroyer Lasso sank Sunday off the Dutch coast, having struck a mine or been torpedoed, according to an official statement.

The British press bureau controverts the German official statement with regard to the locality where the Lasso was sunk, saying that the destroyer was sent to the bottom "a few miles off the Dutch coast, and not in the channel, as the German admiralty pretends."

The sinking of a German submarine by a Swedish cruiser between Stockholm and Skargaard is rumored in Copenhagen, according to the newspaper Dagens Nyheter, of that city, quoted in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch.

The Swedish warship's reported action was taken, the dispatch adds, in accordance with the Swedish government's decision calling upon Swedish warships to fire upon foreign fishing vessels entering Swedish waters.

WOUNDED MEN WERE MUTILATED.

Russian Prisoners Were Also Hanged by the Austrians.

On the Isonzo-Front, Aug. 15.—The whole line of battle is visibly moving forward. The Italian projectiles hourly burst just a little further eastward. The Austrians are not running, but they are clearly retreating with some speed.

Opinions differ as to where the retreat will end, but the matter emphatically is not one for public discussion. The Austrians' bitterness of soul may be judged by their behavior.

At Dobho Russian prisoners of war, who had been brought in to make roads for the Austrians, were found hanged, possibly as a revenge for the escape of other Russian prisoners, who swam the Isonzo the other day and reached the Italian lines after hiding for four nights among the rocks.

Italian wounded were found mutilated. I have seen terribly spiked maces that are habitually used by the Austrians to break the skulls of the wounded; also thongs, with leaden balls attached to sticks, which the Austrians use to coerce laggards.

Owing to the fact that so many Italian and Austrian soldiers have worked in the United States and Canada, it often happens that English is the only language in which they can converse mutually.

Yesterday I saw a small band of prisoners being brought in by the Bersaglieri, who answered my remarks upon the stout physical appearance of the prisoners by saying in good New York dialect, "They can hold all right maces!" At which the prisoners grinned with evident understanding.
