Special Correspondence by H. F. Gadsby.

Button-Displaying Colonels.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—The Government's registration scheme for recruiting seems to be undergoing a process of gradual oblivion. It was received coldly by the employers of labor, by the trades and labor unions, and most of the other persons concerned, so we hear no more about it.

So far as public opinion has, expressed itself in the newspapers of both political parties, the registration scheme looks like a hoar frost. Only two classes voices entire approval—those who might expect to get jobs as registrars and census takers, and those who would like a chance to insult Quebec, whose recruiting has been carried on under the active disapproval of Major-General Sir Sam Hughes' scurry treatment of that gallant soldier, Gen. Lessard, and the seditious teachings of the Borden Government's allies, Bourassa and Lavergne.

The long end of the registration scheme is avowedly general badge and button distribution for those who professed that they wanted to go to the front, but for some reason or other were unable to do so. A comprehensive answer, as it were, to the plagues' fellow, who asks: "Why aren't you at the front?" Quizzed thus, any beneficiary of Sir Sam's badge and button plan can flash his evidence and avoid further argument.

The badge and button plan is a modification of the Chinese system, which indicates distinctions of rank and merit by jackets, caps, peacock feathers and the like. Jackets, of course, we cannot adopt, because the khaki covers everything and feathers are already monopolized by the Jig-dier-bridles and such, but badges are free for all and will be used extensively. The next session of Parliament may be expected to set aside an appropriation of a million dollars for badges. A very neat thing in the way of a gun metal badge, with a suitable ribbon, can be made for a quarter of a dollar, so that for one million dollars four million people can be provided with badges, and thus present a dauntless front to the enemy.

For another half million dollars the same number of citizens can be supplied with buttons, which can be worn on the coat lapel when it is not convenient or modest to wear a badge. The buttons, I take it, will be worn daily, so that he who runs may read the barked heroism of the button displaying; but the badges will be reserved for ceremonial occasions, such as banquets, picnics, clam bakes and the like.

Of course, the badges will vary in color and degree, because this is a democratic country and these distinctions will include all shades of patriotic endeavor. For instance, there will be a badge for the M. P. colonel who drew two salaries, one as a member of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, who was a soldier in everything but the expedition part of it, and the other as a legislator, who felt that it was his higher function to stay at home and play politics. The motto on that badge will be "He stood between love and duty and cashed in on both," and the ribbon will be white and yellow. The white stands for the spotless condition of his hands as far as German blood is concerned.

Then there is the church parade colonel, who burst forth in active service khaki and then let it go at that. He saw the boys off at the station, waved good-bye to them, said "God be with you, I can't go," and that was as far as he got. Then he retired to his country place to brood over the reconstruction problems which he must help to solve after the war. His motto of course, "Safety First," and his ribbon will be red and yellow, the red signifying the rage he felt when circumstances compelled him to let somebody else fight the Germans.

Next comes the eleventh-hour colonel who is real brave up to the time his regiment is ordered abroad, and then drops out on sick leave. Neuritis or chilblains or something like that, superinduced by a sanguinary desire to slay him, if his doctor would only let him. The motto on his badge would read "Ad Astra per Aspirin," and his ribbon will be white and yellow. The white stands for the spotless condition of his hands so far as German blood is concerned, also for the color of his face when he thinks what might have happened had he gone to the front and lost his temper with the enemy.

Then there is the accountant colonel, who connects himself with the Audit Office or the Pay and Record Office, and cuts a great figure adding up sums in full uniform. His motto is "The fountain pen is mightier than the sword." Black and yellow are his colors, the black signifying that ink is his medium, not gore.

tendency to gout from flashing his sword on the enemy. He will generally be found recruiting. He is so busy urging others to go that he can't go himself. His motto is "Let him do it." His ribbon is blue and yellow, the blue being some slight token of his feelings when he happens to hear what people are saying about him.

Then there is also the colonel who would have ridden off gallily to the war only he couldn't find a horse that understood the European languages. There is no such horse in Canada, not even in King's County, Nova Scotia, where DeWitt Foster picked up a lot of venerable and erudite specimens. The consequence is that many a colonel who couldn't think of riding anything but a polychrome horse, has been cut out of an active and glorious share in the war. The badge distribution takes him in, of course. His motto is the same as Richard the Third's, "A horse! A horse!" only not spoken so violently. His ribbon is yellow and chestnut for the gap about the horse being old stuff.

The steel colonels have a special badge with two bars, one bar not being enough to inscribe their profits. The motto is "We got our bit," the ribbon a deep purple, as indicating the royal proportions of their dividends.

MAY USE CANNING FACTORY

AT NAPANEE TO FILL PORK AND BEANS CONTRACT.

With the Government—Kingston Man Seeking Horse in Napanee—Three Deserters Caught—Presentation to Lieut. Jemmett.

(From Our Own Correspondent) Napanee, Sept. 6.—The William Davis & Co., pork packers of Toronto, may open up the canning factory in order to fulfill a contract they have with the Government for pork and beans. A representative of the company was here looking over the building and making inquiries as to labor, etc. If the company decides to use the building it will require about eighty hands, and will keep them employed until the spring.

In the Police Court before Magistrate Rankin two drunks pleaded guilty to the charge, and were fined $1 and costs each. G. Fitzpatrick of Kingston, on a similar charge, was also assessed $1 and $4 costs. Sergt. Skinner, 155th Battalion, was here yesterday looking for absentees from that Battalion, and with the assistance of the Chief of Police, succeeded in locating and arresting Ptes. H. Babcock, Oscar Bumhower and Sam Switzer, who were later taken back to Kingston. Word was sent in yesterday that a woman of deserts had been seen near Strathcona, and Chief Barrett went out, but the soldiers had gone, leaving their uniform in the cellar of an uninhabited house. No trace of them could be found. The uniform apparently belonging to the 146th Battalion, is still in the hands of the police.

A. E. Howard of Kingston is here looking for a grey mare which was hired out on Saturday last to a man for a few hours, and who has not yet returned it. The horse and rig were seen in Napanee yesterday afternoon, and the Chief of Police expects to locate it shortly.

At the meeting of the Town Council held last night Lieut. Douglas Jemmett, Canadian Engineers, was presented with an illuminated address by Mayor Rutten on behalf of the town, in appreciation of his devotion to duty and sacrifices at the front. Napanee is proud of its sons who have responded to the call of the Empire, and also of the fact that Lieut. Jemmett's services were recognized by the authorities, when he was awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal.

Mexican Bandits Caused Deaths.—Laredo, Tex., Sept. 6.—Twenty-five Mexican soldiers and eleven passengers were killed last Thursday when a Constitutional train was wrecked by bandits claiming allegiance to Carrero Torres, according to advices reaching the border. The bandits butchered the train guards and carried away everything movable, those advices said. The wreck occurred between San Luis and Tampico, below Carisena.

It is not probable that the Manitoba ex-ministers will be retried. Contractor Kelly may be sentenced at once.

At Glasgow, Scotland, A. J. Balfour, the first lord of the Admiralty, said Britain must have more warships.

A FIRE AT TWEED. Paul King's Harness Store Was Badly Damaged.

Tweed, Sept. 1.—In the early morn of Wednesday last Paul King's harness store was swept by fire. The origin of the fire is unknown, the first intimation of it being seen by a lady hurrying to catch an early morning train. Before firemen arrived the blaze was quenched by a zealous bucket brigade, but not before the contents were nearly ruined. D. McNaught, accountant-teller at the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, has been transferred to Almonte, where he will perform the duties of accountant. Mr. McNaught's removal from Tweed is a promotion.

On Tuesday last Mrs. P. Badgley left for Toronto, where she purposes spending a couple of weeks.

Owing to the decreased demand for carriage hubs, Mr. Fitzgerald's hub factory has opened.

Mrs. Frank Maynes returned last week from Trentonbridge, where she spent a couple of weeks camping with friends. Mrs. William Breen spent last week with Montreal friends. W. Turcott is holidaying with his brother Lee, of Buffalo.

PEQUOT CASINO WRECKED. Society Hotel at New London, Conn., Gutted by Flames.

New London, Conn., Sept. 6.—Pequot Casino, society folks' beautiful club house, situated at the mouth of the harbor, valued at $75,000 was practically destroyed by fire shortly after noon yesterday. This is the fourth time the Casino has been razed by fire in the past quarter of a century.

The Casino has been the only aristocratic hotel in the summer colony, and many private dinners, dances and functions have been held in the spacious club house.

Baroness von Hasburg and Mrs. J. S. Morgan were among the patrons at the Casino, the former losing a diamond-studded match safe and the latter had a close call from parting with her expensive wardrobe and paraphernalia, her trunks being tossed out upon a lawn by the firemen just in time to save them.

The one who gives and regrets is not blessed by the act.
