THE CONFESSIONS OF ROXANE
(By Frances Walter)

ENTERTAIN A LOT OF SCANDAL MONGERS

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The tongues of the gossips soon became so annoying that I determined to take steps to stop their talk about me. I decided to invade the camp of the enemy.

Our town was not a large one, but the few people who lived in it loved amusement, and there was hardly a night that there was not a dance or a social function of some sort given by a member of the set in which I formerly moved. My plan was to give a reception, followed by a dance. I hit upon this programme because I could invite both old and young. I asked two young magrons who I knew had done most of the gossiping about me to assist me, and the one in receiving, I could not conceive of a more effective way to satisfy their curiosity about me, and I made up my mind that I would tell them that Arthur had gone on a long business trip, and that it was necessary for me to return to my mother's home during his absence. I knew that nothing stimulated gossip so much as mystery and I determined that there should be no more mystery thrown about me.

Mother entered heartily into my plan and assisted me in the preliminaries, but my main reliance in carrying out the arrangements for the affair was upon William. Of course I did not tell him my motive. I simply stated to him that I had been invited to so many places since my return that I felt I was under social obligations to nearly every one in town, despite the fact that I had accepted none of the invitations which had been sent me. William accepted my statements without enthusiasm, but he was plainly nonplussed. He could not understand why I wanted to entertain everybody in town, but he did not ask me any questions. Everything I told him to do he did with alacrity and he even made suggestions for the carrying out of certain details of the affair.

William did not care for social affairs. He told me that he had only been to two or three receptions in his life. He did not dance, and insisted that having reached the advanced age of 28 he was too old to learn.

"But you may be sure of one thing, Roxane," he told me, "I shall enjoy being at your reception. It will be an unusual experience for me because I feel that this affair is partly my own, on account of the errands I have run for you in connection with it. I am almost sorry that I do not know how to dance, but I suppose I can entertain the aged and infirm while the younger folk are enjoying themselves whirling about the room."

"You certainly will not entertain the aged and infirm," I told him.

majority of them came out of curiosity, for they undoubtedly had heard a good deal of my affairs and they wanted to see me. Many of them, I imagined, longed for an opportunity to question me about Arthur, some of them actually did bring up the subject, but to all questions I turned a radiantly happy countenance, which in itself was sufficient to disabuse the minds of most of any suspicion that there was any trouble between my husband and me. Old Mrs. Tompkins, whose tongue was known to be the longest and sharpest in town, was not so easily satisfied. She insisted upon my giving her a large section of the history of my married life, and wound up with the remark, smilingly uttered, that "Mr. Pembroke had better come home or he would find a certain well-known candidate for Congress was in love with his wife."

The remark stunned me for a moment, but summoning my self-control I told the old spitfire that Mr. Pembroke would not hasten his return because he knew that his wife could be trusted under any circumstances.

Thereupon Mrs. Tompkins shook her head and observed that young women these days needed watching whether they were married or unmarried.

"They are certainly being watched,"

Your Hands First!

IT would be an economy for you to use Ivory Soap for washing dishes. Its gentle action cannot roughen the skin; the hands need no extra attention after one works with it. And it costs so little more than ordinary yellow soaps and so little is needed for the work that the difference in cost is not worth considering.

Try Ivory Soap a week for washing dishes and notice the difference in your hands—and in the dishes.

HUGE FLOWERS' BLOOM.

On the New Hats Blossoms Not Yet Classified in Botany.

After several seasons of small flowers fashion has suddenly swerved to the other extreme and is now advocating the use of immense flowers for both hat and dress decoration.

An instance of this is found in a Paris hat of red straw, whose high crown and very broad brim are connected by a narrow ribbon of the same hue tied in a bow at the back. Piped directly in front is an immense rose of silk and velvet, also of the red color.

Poppies of tremendous size are being employed for dress hats. They are reproduced in natural colors, with emphasis on the red and pink nuances. Frequently the poppies are pulled apart and the petals in some fantastic and overlapping manner are arranged about the base of the crown. The effect is very striking when the hat is of azure blue or straw and the poppies in flame color.

Another novel bloom is found in flowers of mica—transparent and having the appearance of a grayish alabaster. Such blossoms are sometimes placed on the top of the crown of a hat of black milan straw, the additional altitude serving to balance the extreme width of the brim. Besides the flowers, sometimes a glazed band of ivory ribbon is employed.

Outward appearances are often misleading. One can seldom tell what is in a man or a mince pie from outward appearances.

Skin deep beauty is all right—if the girl has the money.

Everyone will admire them three times a day—shining, spotless dishes.

You know, if a thing is worth doing at all, it is worth doing well. So, for your dishes and utensils, use Sunlight Soap. Its soft, creamy lather ensures a shining cleanliness that will be a delight to the eye.

WOMAN SO WEAK COULD NOT SLEEP

Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

North Oxford, Mass.—"I had lost three children and I was all run down and so weak I could not sleep at night. My eyesight would leave me and everything I ate upset my stomach. I was very nervous and if I would start to sweep I would have to stop and lie down before I could finish. I was looking over the paper one day and read of a woman who felt as I did and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I took it too. Now I am proud to tell you I am feeling fine and have given birth to a boy baby. He is my 'Pinkham' baby. I keep a bottle of Compound in my house always."—Mrs. PETER MARCO, Box 54, North Oxford, Mass.

Sleeplessness, indigestion, weakness, and nervousness are symptoms which indicate a lowered vitality of the female organism, and the tonic, strengthening properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs, contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, are just what is needed by every woman who is in Mrs. Marco's condition.

teaspoon curry powder, 1 teaspoon butter.

Utensils—Saucepans, teaspoon, tablespoon, double boiler, small bowl, colander to wash rice in.

Directions—Wash the rice through several waters, put over fire with 1 pint of boiling water and boil twenty minutes; add the milk, which has been wet with a little cold water. Add the salt, pepper, onion, curry powder and butter; boil three minutes.

Plum Sherbet
Materials—Two quarts of blue plums, 3 cups sugar, 4 cups water.

Utensils—Saucepans, meat mangle, strainer, ice cream freezer, salt and ice for freezer.

Directions—Wash the plums and prick with needle; put in saucpan with water; boil until tender; then add sugar and boil three minutes. Strain 3 cups of juice; put in freezer; add another cup of water and freeze same as ice cream. It is best to taste the juice, as some plums are more sour than others, and for freezing they must be sweeter.
