BOXING GOSSIP.

A cablegram has been received from Jimmy Dime, who is in Australia with five American fighters, stating that George Chip, the crack middleweight of Pittsburgh, and Lee Darcy, the Australian middleweight champion, have been matched to meet in a twenty-round at Snowy Baker's open air boxing arena at Sydney on the afternoon of Sept. 15. Chip is to receive a guarantee of $2,000, with the privilege of accepting 25 per cent. of the gross receipts.

Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion, who knocked out George Chaney, the Baltimore featherweight, in three rounds on Labor Day, is to give sparring exhibitions at a theatre in Baltimore next week for which he is to receive $1,500. Kilbane received exactly $11,533.87 for beating Chaney. The gross receipts of the fight figured up $30,757.

Jimmy Johnston, manager of Joe Welling, the clever Chicago light-weight, announces that if either Benny Leonard, Charley White or Freddie Welsh would consent to take on Welling in a twenty-round bout at New Orleans, that he would make a side bet of $5,000 that Welling would get the decision.

Dominick Tortorich, the premier fight promoter of New Orleans, is now trying to clinch a twenty-round go between Johnny Dundee, the fast Italian lightweight, and Freddie Welsh, the world's lightweight champion, to be decided at his club next month. Tortorich has offered a purse of $18,000 for the contest, and Scotty Monteith has already accepted for Dundee.

Tom Cowler, the English heavy-weight, who has not fought for several months, his last battle being with Jack Dillon, who knocked him out in two rounds, is ready to battle again, and his new manager, Jimmy Johnston, is looking around to sign him up with some good "heavy."

Ray Carney, of Minneapolis, Minn., weighing 185 pounds, with "Fred Fulton's" gain hanging at his belt, has arrived in New York in search of bouts. He won over Fulton on a foul, having the big fellow whipped to a standstill when Fulton swung a low punch and was disqualified. Carney has won seventeen straight fights via the K.O. route and is after Bill Brennan, Charley Welbert and Gunboat Smith. Dick Curley is his manager.

John Weismantel, matchmaker of the Broadway Sporting Club, is trying to arrange a match between Jack Britton, welter champion, and Al McCoy, middleweight champion. Britton has already signed, declaring that he thinks he can stop McCoy. As yet Weismantel hasn't been able to induce McCoy to box the clever Britton.

Harry Lewis, former aspirant for the title of champion middleweight boxer, who is now crippled, is suing his wife, Sarah Lewis, and saying funds and banks to recover about $70,000 of his earnings in the prize ring.

Lewis' right name is Harry Beerman. On June 3, 1909, while he was in the zenith of his fighting career, he married Sarah Neiditch, who acted as treasurer for her fighter-sweetheart during their courtship days. The defendant, it is averred, failed to deposit the money in Lewis' name as he ordered her to do.

THE INTERNATIONAL FINISHES THIS WEEK

It is Not the Same Live League as Some Years Ago.

The International Baseball League finishes its season this week, and, looking back, it has not been the bed of roses that the magnates expected with the termination of the Federal League. In this respect the magnates have nobody to blame but themselves. Last winter some of the owners spent their spare time shouting how cheap they were going to make the league, and this year they were surprised because the fans refused to patronize them. Very few clubs in the league made money, but that is not surprising in view of the cheap way everything was run. In some instances the moguls shielded themselves by announcing they were up to the salary limit. Then the recall of certain star players of several clubs in the middle of the season did not help any and only demonstrated what a weak sister the International was in baseball. The International has gone back in the last few years, and is not the same live organization it was several seasons ago, when everybody conceded that it was only a stepping point into the majors. Just now it is gasping for existence, especially in burghs like Richmond, Newark, Baltimore and Rochester.

Darcy is Coming.

Word has come to New York boxing promoters that Lee Darcy, the Australian boxer sensation, wants to come to the United States, to meet American middleweights and light-heavies. He is said to have obtained permission of the military authorities in Australia for his departure. Negotiations for a bout between Darcy and Gibbons or Dillon have been started.

A.A.U. Meet For Cleveland.

It was announced yesterday by Frederick W. Rubien, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, that the next championship games of the union will be held in Cleveland.

BOXERS ARE STRANDED IN BUENOS AYRES

Cable Home For Boat Fare—The Conditions Are Not Rosy There.

The deplorable condition of the valiant cluster of North American boxers who, stranded in Buenos Ayres, are cabling home for boatfare, will at least have an educational effect.

It can be asserted without the slightest fear of contradiction that any South American promoter, no matter how high-sounding and patrician his name, who asks any New York promoter, manager or boxer to journey to that land of foliage and finance and engage in a "monster boxing carnival," will be a visual left hook on the original invitation, and doubtless a digital jab for a repetition.

It should prove a lesson that boxers and managers never will forget, and the only strange feature of the whole affair is that astute managers like Buckley McKetrick and Johnston should have been led into the scheme like lambs to the slaughter.

Because a rather distinguished looking person, South American style and bearing the tophetty appellation of Marcel Pecan Del Sar, assured these wise managers of the north that they would get barrels of gold for the services of their boxers in Buenos Ayres, it does not follow that the managers should have swallowed the yarn without the customary application of salt.

DETROIT AND BOSTON

Will Soon Clash in a Series That May Be Decisive.

Detroit and Boston, in the American League, soon will be at it in an important series. Next week the Red Sox will journey to the Tigers' fair for the final three games with their chief rivals, and history probably will be made for Ban Johnson's circuit at that time. Boston has a rather hard row to hoe after the club leaves Washington, for the remaining games all are scheduled on foreign fields, with the exception of seven at the finish. On the other hand, the White Sox and Detroit have an almost unbroken stretch of at-home games before the final games are played.

Giants Get Herbert.

The New York Giants have repurchased Pitcher Fred Herbert from Toronto. Herbert was booked for the Giants last fall, but in the spring of the present year was turned back. He has had a good season with the Leafs and should be able to make the grade in the big show now.

Roberts Lost to Wanderers.

If there is any N.H.A. hockey in the coming winter, which prospect seems remote at the present time, Wanderers will in all probability be without the services of Gordie Roberts, for years ranked as one of the best forwards in the league.

President Lichtenhein has received a letter from Roberts, who is now located in New Westminster, B.C. Gordie says he is located there permanently for the practice of medicine, in which he graduated at Mc-
