Practically all the better coats now selling are trimmed with contrasting pelts. Lynx, skunk and fox are the popular fur.

The bands at the edge of the coats are quite wide. The collars, the popular cape or monk style, are quite wide. The cuffs, gauntlet style, are very deep.

J. B. KITCHEN RACED ACROSS THE LAKE TO KINGSTON.

Rough Passage, b

While coming across the lake from Oswego, bound for Kingston, schooner J. B. Kitchen, which has been carrying coal for James Swift & Co. during the present season, sprang made for Kingston, and the boat arrived at Swift's wharf with 600 tons of coal on Thursday at one o'clock. The boat laid up at the far end of Swift's wharf, and later the services STRUCK BY A SIGN of the Donnelly Wrecking and Salvage Co. were called. The water in the boat is now being pumped out. On Thursday night some of hatches were taken off, and the vessel is completely filled with water. The boat has not sunk, however and although the decks are flooded quite deep, there is little danger of it sinking. The water will be pumped out by the salvage company, and will
