HELD UP IN THE STORM

PARTY OF TWENTY-THREE MARINERS FEASTED AT SOUTH BAY

They Had Tied Up At McDonald's Cove and Had Used Up All Their Supplies—Had Fatted Calf Offered Them.

How they killed the fatted calf—or beg pardon, it was a sheep, dug up potatoes, scoured the town for potatoes and other eatables is the interesting tale coming from South Bay, concerning a party of twenty-three Kingston mariners, who were held up in that port from Sunday morning last until the following Tuesday morning, as a result of the big "blow," which has played havoc with the schedule of the mariners for the past two weeks.

The mariners who got stranded at South Bay were men of two tugs and barges of the Montreal Transportation Company, and the crews of the good ships Joska and Jex.

The "bunch" left Kingston last Friday, and got as far as McDonald's Cove, when they had to go into shelter. They "sneaked" over to South Bay on Sunday, and as no great supply is taken on these short trips, and as there were a hungry lot of men to feed, supplies got pretty low. The chief cooks decided to go in search of food and they had the best of luck. The very first man they lacked had a good offering.

"Now look here," he said, "I've got a cow, a calf, and a sheep, and you can take your pick." After due consideration, it was decided to take the sheep. It was Sunday, but then the hungry mariners can be forgiven for all they did. The sheep was brought to the slaughter. Then some of the old tars set out to get potatoes. They came across a farmer, and made a bargain with him for two long rows of "spuds." The men on the steamers might have dispensed with this part of the bill-of-fare, but old-timers on the barges must have their potatoes. And they got them. A few other luxuries were tucked away, and with the best of meat and potatoes, the members of the hungry crews were soon in their glory.

The ladders of all the vessels were well stocked later on, so when the storm let up a little on Tuesday and the boats headed across the lake, they had sufficient to last them "overseas."

HER HOME EVER OPEN TO MEN IN KHAKI

Mrs. William Spooner, Jr., Albert Street, Shows Kindness to Soldiers.

One way in which citizens can show their patriotism, and also win the gratitude of parents whose sons are at Barrieffield camp, is by giving up a portion of their time, and opening their homes for the entertainment of the young men in khaki. For a young man, living away from home for the first time, and exposed to the manifold temptations of a soldier's life, the opportunity to spend a part of his leisure time in a christian home is a piece of good fortune for which he may long be thankful.

One Kingston lady, who has done much good along this line, is Mrs. William Spooner, Jr., who during the summer has kept the door of her residence on Albert street ajar for her friends in uniform. Her appreciation of her kindness has been shown in various ways but Mrs. Spooner is doing her bit solely from a sense of duty. Although she prizes the kind messages she has received from mothers, who tender their warmest thanks for the wholesome influence she has brought to bear upon their sons.

Last Monday evening all those who had partaken of Mrs. Spooner's hospitality during the past summer, met at her home to spend a few hours in games and music, prior to going overseas. Dainty refreshments were served and many expressions of gratitude and esteem were extended to their hostess, under whose roof they might never all meet again. The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" brought to a close an evening which will live long in the memories of those present.

BORN IN WATERTOWN, N.Y.

Pte. William Bowman, of the 21st Battalion Was Wounded.

Relatives in Watertown, N.Y., have been notified of the wounding at the front of Pte. William Bowman, who went overseas with the 21st Battalion. Pte. Bowman was born in Watertown about twenty-five years ago, and has two aunts, two uncles and a grandmother living in that city. His grandfather is at Barrieffield camp. His father went overseas with the first contingent, and is now a driver in No. 1 section. Some six weeks ago Pte. Bowman's father got leave of absence and went to see his son. This was the first time father and son had been together since they left England for France.

"EVERYWOMAN" DELIGHTFUL

CAPACITY HOUSE AT THE GRAND ON THURSDAY NIGHT.

Miss Katharine Hart, a Kingston Girl, Took Part of "Vice"—Miss Shay, the Leading Lady, Led Her Before the Curtain.

"Everywoman," the allegorical play telling of a quest after love and departure from truth, and which won the favor of the continent some years ago because of the great lessons it teaches, was witnessed by a capacity house at the Grand last night, and was as delightful as before.

Miss Paula Shay makes a charming "Everywoman" and is fully equal to the demands of this difficult role. Miss Shay is a beautiful young woman and a decidedly clever actress. The role of "Nobody" is taken by George Sydenham, whose speeches delight all lovers of dramatic art. All the other roles are splendidly portrayed, the company being strong throughout.

The audience was particularly interested in the role of "Vice," which is filled by Miss Katharine Hart, one of Kingston's own young ladies. Miss Hart appears on the programme as Miss Kay Carleton, her stage name. A few months ago she made her first appearance before the footlights here in vaudeville. Deciding to break into stage life she went to New York, and so impressed theatrical managers that she was given a part in "Everywoman," and fills her role to perfection. As "Vice," the courtesan, she sang and danced well, and gives promise of making a mark in the theatrical profession. Miss Hart slipped near the wings during her whirling dance and took the floor, but recovered herself with the agility of a hockeyist. The leading lady paid the Kingston girl a compliment at the close of the fourth act when she led her before the curtain amid hearty applause.

The staging of "Everywoman" was magnificent, the banquet scene and New Year's Eve on Broadway being superb. The effects were brilliant and the music by a special orchestra was greatly enjoyed.

Kingston's Population Increases.

Assessor Gordon's annual report is to be issued on Monday. Both assessment and population shows increases. It is difficult for the assessor to figure the settled population owing to the number of people coming to Kingston and staying for a month or so while the troops are here. He has had to eliminate such, but still the population is greater than a year ago, when it showed an increase of a couple of hundred over 1914.

Shed Caught Fire.

A fire started on the roof of a coal shed on Barrack street, owned by Robert Crawford, Thursday afternoon, but very slight damage was done. Capt. Frederick Reid's went over from the Ontario street fire hall and extinguished the blaze with a Babcock. It is supposed that the fire was started by a spark from a nearby chimney.
