UNION NOT A CHANGE.

In the Organization of the Local Church.

There is an unfortunate and somewhat widespread misapprehension regarding the effect on local congregations, of the proposed union between Congregationalists, Methodists and Presbyterians.

The following paragraphs, taken in large part from the basis of union should remove all doubts.

The section on polity in the basis of union begins with the statement that in view of the Joint Committee on Union "it is possible to provide for substantial local freedom and at the same time secure the benefits of a strong connection with the co-operative efficiency." "Co-operative efficiency and local freedom" was the watchword of the Joint Committee on Union in outlining the organization of the united church.

FIRST: For charges formed subsequently to union there will be, 1.—"The session," consisting of the minister and a group of elders elected by those in full church membership. The rights and duties of the session are in general those of the session in any Presbyterian church at the present time.

2.—"The Committee of Stewards," corresponding exactly to the Board of Managers in Presbyterian congregations.

3.—"The Official Board," corresponding to the Quarterly Board of Methodist congregations, and consisting of "the Session and Committee of Stewards, with representatives in full church membership of such other departments of church work as may be agreed on by the General Council" (the body corresponding to the Presbyterian General Assembly, or the Methodist General Conference).

The duties of the "Official Board" are:

1.—To secure contributions for missionary and other general objects of the church.

2.—To select representatives, in full church membership, of the pastoral charge to the Presbytery.

3.—To submit to the pastoral charge or local church for its consideration reports on life and work, including a full statement of receipts and expenditures, and of indebtedness and of estimates for the ensuing year.

4.—To transmit from the pastoral charge, through the Presbytery, to the Settlement Committee representations concerning the pastoral relation.

SECOND: This threefold organization of the local congregation was considered by the Joint Committee on Union to be more effective than that existing in any of the uniting churches at the present time, and will be the form of organization for charges to be constituted subsequent to the Union, but it is expressly declared that charges existing previous to union "shall be entitled to continue the organization and practices enjoyed by them at the time of the union, subject in general affairs to the legislation, principles and discipline of the united church. Their representatives in the next higher governing body or court shall be chosen as at present." Charges existing at the time of the union may, however, if they so desire, adopt at any time the plan of organization prescribed for the pastoral charge to be formed subsequent to the union. There is thus absolute local freedom to change or not to change.

So carefully does the basis of union safeguard local freedom, that a paragraph is added which states that "churches, charges, circuits or congregations received subsequent to the union into the united church, with the approval of Presbyteries, shall be entitled if they so desire, to the privileges of the preceding section."

Surely, in the light of these quotations, it is utterly aside from the facts to speak or think of this union as involving the coercion of congregations. Congregations of the Presbyterian church can go into the union without any change, even the most trifling, in organization or practice, but will have the advantage of serving in a wider fellowship of congregations and of uniting their gifts and efforts in the more effective and comprehensive missionary policy of a united church in which denominational rivalry has given way to common effort.
