WOMAN A PHYSICAL WRECK

Tells in Following Letter How She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Milwaukee, Wis.—"Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a physical wreck. I had been going to a doctor for several years but he did me no good. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I decided to give it a fair trial, and it gave me relief from bearing down pains which had been so bad that I would have to lie down. I also used the Sanative Wash and it has done me a great deal of good, and I am not troubled with a weakness any more."—Mrs. P. L. BRILL, 1299 Booth Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

The most successful remedy for woman's ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test for forty years, which would be impossible if it did not have genuine merit. For special advice, free, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

THE CONFESSIONS OF ROXANE

(By Frances Walter)

I MARVEL AT MR. GORDON'S SELF-CONTROL.

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

I struggled hard to retain my composure when I heard of the great change in our fortunes, and I believe I succeeded fairly well, for when I spoke again my voice was clear and even. I was determined to know if Mr. Gordon had been badly involved through the transaction.

"Indeed," I exclaimed, with well-simulated surprise. "You never told me he was interested in the A. B. C. Company."

"For a very good reason. I did not know it myself. His connection was similar to that which Henderson expects to have. He had some reason for hiding the fact that he was in control of the concern, and he did it very well. Even the officers of the company did not know that he was a stockholder."

"Did he control the company?"

"I understand now that he did. He had a large part of his fortune invested in it."

"And he lost it?"

"Well, I should say he has dropped a million or two. Of course, he will have something left, even of his investment in the A. B. C. Company, but he is a heavy loser."

"That is business," I replied with a tinge of bitterness. "He could not have expected anything else."

"Business!" exclaimed Arthur. "Why, of course it is. And furthermore, that is the way Gordon made everything he has. He took it away from others through the stock market. He deserves to lose everything."

"I cannot indorse that statement, for I do not know what his deserts are," I replied. "but it does seem hard that a man should lose a million or so, as you estimate, merely because another man covets his property."

"It is the old story of taking the sword and dying by the sword," Gordon said. "I do not doubt the A. B. C. Company in the same way that Henderson did. He has no right to cry over spilt milk."

"And I do not believe he will be caught crying very much," I replied. "He is not that kind of a man."

"I confess I do not know much about him," said Arthur sourly. "Perhaps he still has enough money left to enable him to strut about in that self-satisfied way of his. Maybe he has not. In any event I shall not worry about it."

I did not pursue the subject, but Mr. Gordon was uppermost in my mind as I reviewed what Arthur had told me. I could not but feel for him. He had lost a large sum of money, a great fortune—and to a certain extent my husband had been a party to the transaction, although he was not the principal agent through whom the loss was incurred.

A LEAP YEAR PROPOSAL

By ELINOR MARSH

When I was a girl of twelve my mother made a will leaving me all her property and naming Nathan Griggs my guardian.

Mother died when I was sixteen years old, and by the terms of the will I was to have possession of my estate when I was eighteen. This left it in Nathan's hands two years after her death.

Now, the truth is, from the time I was fourteen I had a decided fancy for Nathan. I looked upon him as a big brother and in my day dreams of the future thought of him as something nearer. I early passed beyond boys of my own age, which I suppose came partly from the fact that, my father having died when I was a baby and my mother being early accustomed to rely upon me for many things that are not usually left to children, I became older in experience than I was in years.

Be this as it may, by the time I became of age and my property was to be turned over to me I had made up my mind that I wanted Nathan too. As to taking care of my estate myself, I had sense enough to know that I was entirely incompetent.

I also had sufficient feminine instinct to discern that Nathan had a decided fancy for me. But the main reason why mother had made him my guardian and one of the reasons why I wanted him—his integrity—stood in the way of my having him. It was evident to me that he considered me a fiduciary trust. He was so sensitive to his honor that I believed he would consider it a crime for him to become possessed of my fortune even by marrying me.

What was I to do? I couldn't very well offer myself to him. Possibly if I had been nearer his age I might have found a way to propose to him without sacrificing too much of my maidenly modesty, but when I was eighteen he was thirty-one. It might have been easier had I been sure that he wanted me. But how can a girl know that a man wants her till he asks her?

One day in looking over mother's papers I came upon a letter she had written to my aunt, her sister, that had been returned to me after mother's death. In it she said: "I have made a will in Luella's favor and have made Nathan Griggs executor and guardian. I have done this hoping that he will continue managing her estate as her husband. I have said nothing of this, however, to either of them, for in such cases the surest way to defeat a design is to try to bring it about. I rather rely on my observation that they fancy each other."

I spent a long while thinking out a plan by which to use this letter to overcome Nathan's scruples. Gathering some business letters that I found to and from mother and placing this letter I have mentioned among them, I sent them to Nathan with a note in which I suggested that they might be of importance to the estate and that it might be well for him to look them over carefully.

What did he do but return them to me, saying that he had read them all carefully and they were of no importance in a business way?

I was no nearer my object than before.

Well, the day arrived when I was eighteen, and Nathan came to turn over my property to me. It had become evident to me that if I wished to break down his scruples I must argue argument to the winds and use feminine methods. He spread a lot of papers on a table, and we sat down side by side that he might instruct me. I was not thinking of the papers or the instructions; I was thinking of something far nearer my heart.

The more he explained the less I understood. I kept hitching my chair nearer to his till we could be no nearer. Then, pretending that the figures were so minute I had difficulty in seeing them, I leaned sidewise till my shoulder touched Nathan's. In this way I crowded him to the outer edge of his chair, and he could not move farther. My hair was done in a tumultuous fashion, and a loose strand grazed his cheek.

He went on explaining, but it did not take me long to see that his mind was no more on the papers than was mine. At last I succeeded in grazing his cheek with mine.

He broke down at this and went all to pieces. Putting his arms around me, he kissed me and said:

"Luella, when you sent me those letters of your mother's you unintentionally included one that expressed a desire on her part that I should continue the care of your estate as your husband. I have loved you ever since you were a little girl and might have told you so before this had not your mother turned you and your fortune over to me in trust. It has not seemed honorable to me to—"

"Yes, I know all that," I interrupted, impatient at having to draw him out. "You have been very unjust and very stupid. You have wished to turn this estate over to me, knowing that I can't manage it. You should be ashamed of yourself."

"Well, sweetheart, I didn't intend that. But wasn't it fortunate that you happened to include that letter?"

"Yes, if I hadn't been careless I suppose I would have died an old maid for all you cared."

This proposal and acceptance are not in accord with the romance of such things, but it was leap year.

Give a man his choice of making friends or money and he'll not hesitate more than a second.

Cottage Pudding.

Materials—One cup flour, ½ cup sugar, ½ cup milk, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 2 yolks of eggs.

Utensils—Mixing bowl, flour sifter, 2 measuring cups, teaspoon, tablespoon, eggbeater, plate to beat eggs on, bake pan.

Directions—Sift the flour and baking powder into bowl; add the milk, sugar, a pinch of salt, the well-beaten yolks of eggs and the butter; beat 2 minutes and pour into pan, which has been brushed with a little fat. Bake 20 minutes in hot oven. Serve with fruit sauce.

Clear Soup.

Materials—One and one-half pounds lean soup beef, 1 tablespoon cut onion, 1 tablespoon cut carrot, 1 teaspoon salt, a little pepper.

Utensils—Cheesecloth, tablespoon, teaspoon, saucepan, measuring cup, strainer.

Directions—Wipe the meat on wet piece of cheesecloth; cut small same as for stewing; cover with cold water; add seasoning, onion and carrot. Add 8 cups of water and boil slowly until the meat is very tender. Strain through strainer and set aside to cool. When cold remove all the fat and return to fire. Add a few crushed eggshells; bring to a boil and strain through cheesecloth. This can be made the day before and a little caramel added to give a light brown color.

Creamed Eggs on Toast.

Materials—Four hard-boiled eggs, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 teaspoon grated onion, 1 cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon white pepper, ¼ teaspoon paprika, 4 slices toast.

Utensils—Saucepan, measuring cup, teaspoon, tablespoon.

Directions—Put the butter into saucepan, melt, add flour and onion, mix well and add the cold milk slowly, stir until smooth and creamy; then add the salt, pepper and boil 2 minutes. Chop the eggs (yolks and whites together) and add to the cream sauce. Serve on toast, garnish with sprigs of parsley and dust with paprika.

TRANSFER U. S. MAIL BY HUN SUBMARINE
Count Von Bernstorff Makes a Radical Proposal to Washington.

Washington Nov. 2.—The United States Post Office Department is prepared to accept a proposal, submitted by Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, that mails between this country and Germany be transported in merchant submarines. Announcement to this effect was made to-day by Otto Praeger, Second Assistant Postmaster-General.

The proposal is that not more than three hundred pounds of first-class letter mail be carried by each German merchant submarine leaving an American port at the regular steam liner rate. The suggestion was made by the submarine mail being placed in special containers, but the post office authorities rejected that, saying the mails could only be handled with the regular equipment.

Count von Bernstorff probably will confer with postal officials within the next day or so to arrange final details.

"Meat Prices Will Not Come Down" is the cheerful news from the Department of Agriculture. Meat prices will not worry the man or woman who knows that a Shredded Wheat Biscuit will supply more real body-building nutriment than beefsteak or eggs and at much less cost. Shredded Wheat remains the same price, the same high quality, supplying all the nutriment a man needs for a half-day's work. Two shredded wheat biscuits with peaches and cream or other fruits make a complete, nourishing meal at a cost of not over five cents.
