CANNOT WORK OR FIGHT
RUSSIAN IN POLICE TROUSERS ON A CHARGE OF VAGRANCY.

Carl Goldman Will Endeavor to Get Him a Job Assisting in Making of War Munitions—Two Automobile Cases Heard by Magistrate.

Dinin Poleshtek is a Russian, but he is not of the fighting kind. It was said of him in the police court Thursday morning that he was too lazy to work, and that he would make a very poor soldier. Poor Dinin. This is certainly some record to go before the public.

The Russian spent all day Wednesday in the police cells. Vagrancy was the charge the police put against him. Carl Goldman was secured as an interpreter, and when he made known to the Russian what the charge was against him, he stated that he was looking for work, whereupon the magistrate smiled, and stated that surely there would be no trouble in getting the man a job.

"I can get him work all right," said Goldman, "but he's lazy and won't work."

"Would he do for a soldier?" queried the magistrate.

"No, I don't think so," replied Goldman, very sadly, as he looked his fellow-countryman over from head to foot.

"No, I guess not," said the magistrate, in a disappointed tone.

The Russian was then led away, and Goldman will try and get him a job working on munitions. So the Russian, if he cannot go to the front, will have a chance of doing his "bit" at home.

Some further evidence was taken in the case of John Barrett, who was up a few days ago for violation of the Motor Vehicles Act as a result of an accident which occurred at the corner of Brock and King streets last Friday, when he ran his automobile into a boy on a bicycle.

A lad named Daykin, who was riding a bicycle and figured in the accident, told about the smash, after which the magistrate imposed a fine of $5 and costs. He said that three citizens who were not interested parties in the case had sworn that Barrett was driving on his wrong side, and for this reason he imposed a fine. He declared that about ninety out of every hundred drivers cut this corner too short.

Constable Arnel was the complainant in the charge against Mr. Barrett. He was standing at the corner of Brock and King streets at the time of the accident.

I was standing near that corner yesterday, when I noticed a car cutting the corner short," added the magistrate. "There was a policeman on the corner at the time, but I do not know if he reported the case, but I intend to ask the chief about it."

"The case was reported, sir," said Constable Arnel.

Constable Mullinger was the man on the corner, and his eagle eye caught the car making a dash around the corner. The number of the car was noted, and the driver will be summoned. It is understood the car came from Toronto.

Have your lights trimmed and burning. This is a gentle hint to the drivers of motor cars. If your light goes out and a constable catches you taking a spin after dark and before sundown there will be something doing. The story told in the case of R. Vallantyne was about a light that failed, the said lights being on the rear of his automobile, known as "tailights."

Vallantyne was suffering from a bad cold, but made a short speech. He said he always made a practice of keeping his lights burning for his own protection, but in this particular case he could not say as to whether they had been burning or not.

The magistrate imposed a fine of $3 and costs.

LIEUT. PECHKOFF STIRS MONTREAL AUDIENCE

So enthusiastic did the gathering at a luncheon of the Canadian Club in the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, become over an address by Lieut. Z. Pechkoff, a Russian officer who has served with distinction in the French Foreign Legion, that the entire audience broke in to spontaneous cheers some time before he had finished his speech, and kept cheering so long he did not rise to complete it. This dramatic close came after a touching description of conditions at the front, as the Russian lieutenant had seen them, and the Allied parade in Paris on July 14th. Lieut. Pechkoff lost his right arm in the war.

Hear him at Queen's University Highlanders' recruiting meeting, Grant Hall, Monday evening, Nov. 20th. Admission and all seats free.

MR. BRITLING SEES IT THROUGH, By H. G. Wells $1.50

A war novel in the big, broad sense. Not a mere account of the fighting. The greatest book since "The First Hundred Thousand."

"A noble, heart-searching, real story of a man who loses his son in the War and has it out with Fate and Men and God."—Toronto News.

"Mr. Britling Sees It Through" is possibly the only example of creative literature in the English language dealing with the war which seems profound enough in meaning and sufficiently exalted in its point of view to be worthy of its supreme theme."—Marjorie MacMurphy in Toronto News.

"We shall search the many works of the imagination stimulated and overstimulated by the greatest horror of history which England, France and Russia, and no doubt, Germany and the Dual Monarchy as well, will produce. The search will surely yield many a worthy aspirant for the honour, but in the final weighing of awards Mr. Wells' claim will surely stand first. Not in England and this country alone, nor only in the countries of the Triple Alliance, but wherever men feel and think and work for better things."—New York Tribune.

"A powerful, strong story... Has wonderful pages... gems of emotional literature... Nothing could express the whole, momentous situation in England in so few words and such convincing tone... For clear thinking and strong feeling the finest picture of the crisis in the Anglo-Saxon world that has yet been produced."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"I have no words... to say how wonderfully this Wells war epic impresses me, how true it seems, how wise, how tender, how far seeing, how infinitely moving and potent for better understanding and general, uplifting good... so vividly humanized, so honest and thoughtful, of such high philosophic virtue, so amazingly sound, selfless, searching, interpretative and human. So lifelike, moreover, with its quaint cleverness and irresistible glints of humor... the thing still grips me."—Chicago Herald.

TWO PER CENT. ET AL
REPORTS CONCERNING DEMAND FOR TEMPERANCE DRINK VARY.

Cold Weather Has Interfered With the Sale of Two Per Cents, Which Have to Be Served Cold—Efforts Made to Create Thirst.

Some hotelmen report the bar trade as next to nil, while others report it as fairly active. The colder weather has, to some extent, interfered with the demand for two per cents, which have to be served cold, but efforts are being made to create a thirst for other beverages. For those who like a hot drink there is Bovril, and for those who don't want their hot there are innumerable thirst quenchers of the cold variety. One hotel put in a keg of cider, and it found a remarkably ready sale. Then there is a fine array of temperance wines, and even there is a punch without, of course, the usual punch, although it is said to be a very fine drink. For those who like a snap to their beverage there is a ginger wine, but the demand for this is very gingerly.

And last, but not least, there is that old standby—buttermilk, to say nothing of the usual soft drinks. Contrary to the general belief the consumption of soft drinks has decreased since prohibition came into force. Large quantities of soft drinks were mixed with various liquors, and when drinks were coming too fast drinkers often switched off to something that was not intoxicating. Thus it can be seen that stopping the sale of hard stuff would decrease the demand for soft drinks.

THURSDAY'S MARKET.

Butter Was Trifle Higher—Pork Was Plentiful.

There was a small market Thursday, and prices were practically unchanged. Butter, if anything, was a trifle higher, some asking as much as forty-seven cents a pound. Some butter, however, was offered for forty cents. Eggs still commanded from forty-five to fifty cents a dozen. There was only one load of potatoes on the market, and for these $2.35 a bag was asked.

Pork was fairly plentiful, and found a ready sale. Fronts sold for sixteen cents a pound, and hinds for seventeen cents.

There is nothing in the world we're so much interested in as coal. We've studied it for years. It may sound queer to speak of coal buying and selling as a science, but that's what we've made it. Two important discoveries we have made are: That complete satisfaction to our customers pays best, and that the way to win business is to deserve it.
