ATTEMPTED TO SUICIDE

ITALIAN LIFE CONVICT FOUND HANGING IN HIS CELL.

But was Caught in Nick of Time by One of the Guards and Life was Saved—Used Pair of Suspenders.

An Italian convict in the penitentiary, serving a life sentence, attempted to commit suicide during Tuesday night, by hanging himself in his cell, with a pair of suspenders. He was caught in the act by Guard Kenneth Pipe and thus his life was saved.

It is understood that the convict, who has been in the "pen" for some time, has been very melancholy. He has been confined in the separate ward. Fastening his suspenders to the bars of his cell, he made a noose, and placed it around his neck.

While making his rounds, Guard Pipe found the Italian hanging, and lost no time in cutting him down. The convict had only been hanging a second or two, as he did not suffer any ill effects. Had the guard not found him just at the nick of time, he would have succeeded in taking his life.

THEATRICAL NEWS

At the Grand. For tonight and the remaining half of the week an attractive bill has been arranged. Charlie Chaplin will be seen in his latest laugh sensation, "Behind the Screen." Charlie's laughproducer is unravelled in two thousand funny feet of film farce. In this picture Chaplin injects many new and novel side-splitting stunts. Dainty little June Caprice will be seen in the five-reel feature, "Little Miss Happiness," a story brimful of love, mystery and romance. The Pathé News is also billed to unwind all it knows. Feature vaudeville will hold the boards, and will complete a programme well worth seeing.

At the Strand. In the new Triangle feature, "Manhattan Madness," to be seen at the Strand for the last three days of this week, Douglas Fairbanks appears in a role different from any of the previous parts he has played since he made his screen debut. "Manhattan Madness" is a baffling mystery of east and west concerning a love affair, a bet of $5,000, and some real thrills around New York City. A Keystone comedy, "A Modern Enoch Arden," with Mack Swain and Joseph Jackson, and other good reels will also be shown. On the vaudeville end of the programme Groves and Fitzsimmons are high-class comedians and come highly recommended.

At Griffin's. The bill at Griffin's for the last three days is headed by that well-known star, Dustin Farnum in "The Parson of Panamint," a five-reel Famous Player production. Millions have read this wonderful story, published first in the Saturday Evening Post, and upon which this production has been based. Mr. Farnum, as the parson, has literally immortalized one of the most interesting figures in the history of fiction of the Great West. The elements of human interest, of history, tragedy and comedy, as related by Chuckawalla Bill, form the foundation of a very unusual and wonderful story.

GERMANY'S LOSSES DOUBLE BRITAIN'S

Since the Big Somme Drive Began—Some Figures Are Given.

(Special to the Whig.) London, Nov. 30.—The daily average in British casualties in November is 2,487, as compared with 3,492 in October, 3,985 in September, 4,127 in August, 1,925 in July, these being the months of the big Somme offensive. With the exception of the July figures those for November are the smallest since the offensive began. The total losses for five months were slightly over 450,000.

Germany published 3,755,693 casualties during the war up to the end of October and even these do not represent the total German losses, as their lists are far in arrears. Taking into account that the British figures include naval and colonial losses, while Germany's do not, it may be said in a general way that Germany's losses since the big drive began aggregate, on all fronts, double Britain's.

T. W. Perkins, of this city. Father and son went overseas together, and have been in the trenches since last June. Mrs. Perkins thinks that the casualties must have occurred in the same battle.
