WHY THE ASQUITH PARTY SHOULD GO
Toronto Mail.
Among the many matters in regard to which dissatisfaction has been steadily growing are the following: Passiveness of naval policy, failure to solve the submarine problem, the blockade of Germany, inadequate use of our superiority in the air, backwardness in bringing out the man-power of the nation, the excluding of Ireland from the Compulsory Service Act, the toleration of enemy trade, delay in winding up German banks in the United Kingdom. Of these and other questions there have been sharp exchanges in the House.

THE CONFESSIONS OF ROXANE

(By Frances Walter)

I TAKE STOCK OF MY TANGLED AFFAIRS.
(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
I do not know how long I sat there in the conservatory after Harry Pendleton and Miss Phillips had departed. At first I could not realize what it was Mr. Pendleton was saying. He in love with me? Impossible! It was incomprehensible, inconceivable! Why, I had brought everything I could command to bear to make him fall in love with Evelyn Phillips. Instead, I had just heard that he loved me, despite my husband, despite Evelyn, despite everything.

Is it any wonder that I was shocked into a condition of numbness which rendered me for the moment powerless to move? To wake suddenly and find that everything about you has precisely the opposite aspect from what you dreamed it had; to start toward the north and suddenly find that you were headed toward the south; to jump into what you thought was a warm bath and discover it was icy cold—these are some of the things which would have been easy to comprehend as compared with the inexplicable tangle in which I found myself.

As I looked back upon my brief acquaintance with Mr. Pendleton, I could not recall a single instance when he had given me a look or had uttered a word which I might have construed as indicating more than the affection of a new-found friend. Yet I had it from his own lips that he was in love with me; that he had held his emotions in check only until he could decide whether he should confide in me. All the time that I was using a woman's wiles to cast him under the spell of Evelyn's beauty, he was coming under my own influence. And the very woman whom I had selected for him was the one to whom he confided his love for me! The strangeness of the situation gripped me no less than its seriousness—seriousness for him and for me.

Could it be possible that a love-tangle involving Evelyn and Arthur on the one hand and Harry Pendleton and me on the other was in the process of being woven? It was a question which I had to face, and one to which there seemed to be but one answer, and that was an affirmative one.

I had it from Mr. Phillips' own lips that Evelyn was in love with Arthur. I had it from no less an authority than Mr. Pendleton that Mr. Pendleton was in love with me. The only ones, apparently, who had not committed themselves were Arthur and I—and we had no right to love anyone except each other.

So far as my own emotions were concerned I could answer for myself. It is possible that I did not love Arthur with the passion which a wife should feel toward her husband, but one thing was certain—I did not love Harry Pendleton. Could I answer for Arthur also? Could he say that, while he questioned the depth of his affection for me, he had no love in his heart for Evelyn's? Everything that I had observed of Arthur's relations with Evelyn indicated that he was infatuated with her. If this proved true, and if Mr. Phillips was right in his observations, then there was but one course to reach, so far as Arthur and Evelyn was concerned. They loved each other and that was all there was to it.

The next question which came to my mind was, granted that they loved each other, what will come afterwards? Could they cast aside the conventions which surrounded them and respond to the call of the sex, or would they be held apart by that strange power which sometimes defies the strongest of all attractions between human beings.

I arose wearily and made my way toward the drawing room. As I passed a mirror I was startled at the pale face which stared back at me from its depths. Yet I did not stop. I felt that I must rejoin the others. Something was calling to me and I was compelled to obey.

As I entered the drawing room Harry was the first to notice me. In an instant he was beside me. "You are ill!" he cried, seizing my arm to support me. "Sit here while I get a glass of water."

The others crowded about—Mrs. Tomlinson, Mr. Henderson, Arthur, Evelyn and the others—all eager to minister to my needs. But I waved them away.

"It is nothing," I told them; "just a momentary weakness which came upon me while I was seated in the conservatory. It will soon pass away."

I glanced up at Arthur as he stood beside Evelyn. Her beauty cut me like a knife. Bitter as it would be for me to have to acknowledge her as a rival I had the satisfaction of knowing that it required loveliness as great as hers to win my husband away from me!

Line a mould with cooked rice, fill the centre with creamed salmon, cover lightly with rice and steam half an hour. Serve with cream sauce.
St. Regis Scalloped Oysters.
Beat two eggs with two table-spoons of water. Dip a quart of oysters, one by one, in the egg mixture, then in cracker crumbs, and lay in a buttered baking dish. To each layer add salt, pepper, a drop of onion juice, and a tablespoon of chopped celery. Repeat until the dish is full, then add a cup of rich milk, and dot the top with butter. Bake about half an hour.

And They Will Be Scarcer in England When War is Over.
The Journal of Agriculture (Eng.) in a discussion on the English agricultural labor problem says it is estimated that 320,000 men have left the land in the United Kingdom since the beginning of the war, and to this figure will have to be added the number leaving between now and the end of the war; the number who will not go back to the land is estimated at twenty-five per cent. of the enlistments, or at least 80,000.
From examination of the means to be adopted, to meet this serious shortage the committee which has inquired into the matter are forced to the conclusion that unless the agricultural production and population are to be further reduced, a considerable number of ex-service men who were not employed in farm work on the outbreak of the war will have to be brought into English agriculture. Referring to the possibility of the ex-service man settling in the Dominions, or in foreign countries, the committee think a great deal might be done, not only to bring home to him the comparative advantages of life in a more settled country, but to improve the conditions that have hitherto prevailed.
As a means of improving conditions it is suggested that small allotments of land be made near towns so that artisans engaged in industrial employment in those towns may provide a portion of their food supply in their spare time. It is further suggested, with a view of giving an added stimulus to general farming, that duties be placed on agricultural produce imported, which will be sufficient "to give the protection that is necessary to the farmer."
It is evidently the intention of those behind what is proposed to keep at home the prospective farm laborers it was hoped might be attracted to this country. It also appears probable, in addition to this, Canadian farmers may find, after the war, that the United Kingdom will no longer offer a free market for their produce.
Canadians Get V. C.
The Victoria Cross has been awarded to Lieut. Thomas Orde Lawrie Wilkinson, North Lancashire Rifles, killed July 25, aged twenty-two. He was the second son of C. E. Wilkinson of Comox, B.C., and was a surveyor in Victoria when he enlisted originally, early in the war, in the Canadian Grenadiers.
Lieut. Wilkinson was decorated "for most conspicuous bravery. During an attack when a party of another unit were retiring without their machine gun, Lieut. Wilkinson rushed forward, and with two of his men, got the gun into action and held up the enemy till they were relieved. Later, when the advance was checked, during a bombing attack he forced his way forward and found four or five men of different units stopped by a solid block of earth, over which the enemy was throwing bombs. With great pluck and promptness, he mounted a machine gun on top of the parapet and dispersed the enemy bombers. Subsequently he made two most gallant attempts to bring in wounded men, but in his second attempt was shot through the heart, just before reaching his man. Throughout the day he set a magnificent example of courage and self-sacrifice."
The Victoria Cross also is awarded to the Rev. William Robert Addison, chaplain, who early lived in a Canadian lumber camp. He carried a wounded man and assisted several others to cover. By his splendid example of utter disregard of danger he encouraged the stretcher-bearers to go forward under a heavy fire.
No man ever does as much today as he is going to do tomorrow.

Drink Hot Water!
Have Rosy Cheeks and a Peachy Skin
Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.
To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact, to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside bathing every morning for one week.
Before breakfast each day drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives you a splendid appetite for breakfast.
A quarter pound of real hot water phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.
