

Here Are Some Truthful Pictures of the War on the Various Fronts

RUSSIAN CAVALRY crossing Danube on bridge constructed by the Rumanians.

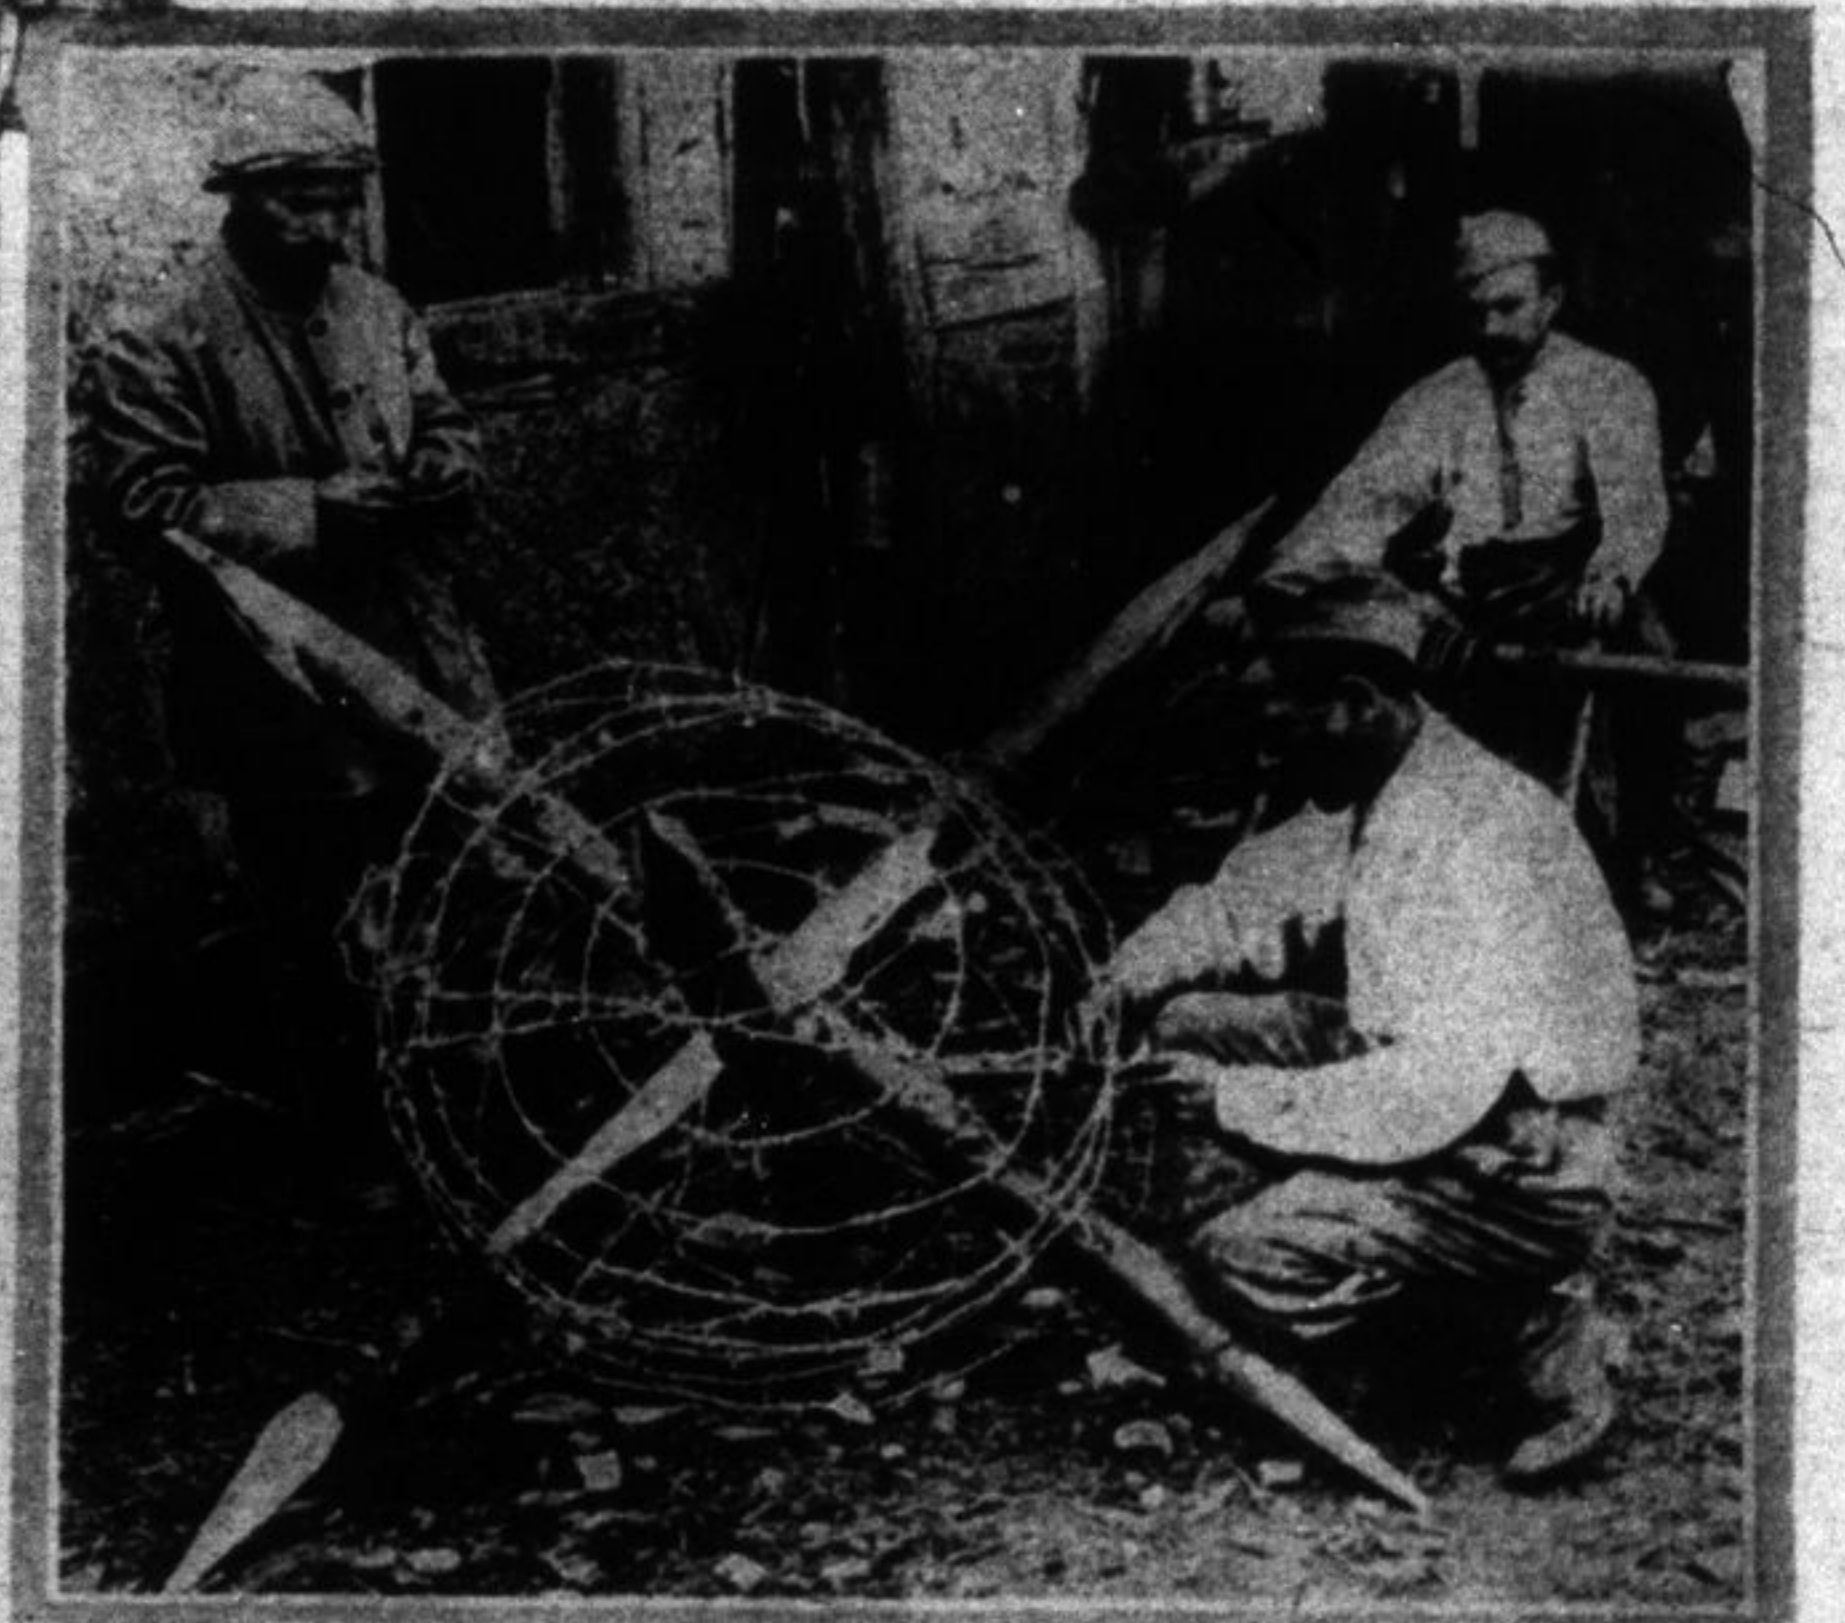

Berlin, October 18th.—"Regent Street was for the most part laid in ruins." This picture of Regent Street was taken on November 7th, and is the answer to the German report. The advertisement on the motor bus proves that the picture was taken since the alleged raid.

Below is a picture of an ambulance station on the Trentino front. In the background are the Toblach Peaks.

Auto sreecher used in the trenches to warn of intended gas attack.

Above are illustrations of a French Machine Gun Squad resting and of French soldiers making wire entanglements for Somme drive. Below is a silhouette study of a part of the United States Navy at anchor in the Hudson River.

