5,000 TROOPS EXPECTED

TO BE IN BARRIEFIELD CAMP WHEN IT OPENS.

Artillery May Train With the Infantry—Strength of the Various Units Here and in the District.

"What will be the number of troops at Barrieheld military camp during the season of 1917" is a question that is being asked by citizens. One officer in reply to the question replied off-hand that there would be well over 5,000 men in training.

To really estimate the number of soldiers which will be under canvas at the camp is very difficult. The names of numbers of the units is a matter of conjecture. Last year, the Depot Artillery Brigade was under canvas for the latter part of the season. This will in all probability be the case during all next season. Whether Petawawa will remain an artillery camp it doubtful, as there is a proposition to have the artillery train with the infantry. In that case the Depot Artillery Brigade would be probably 500 or 600 men strong. There are now 413 officers, N.C.O.'s and men in the brigade. This includes the 5th Divisional Ammunition Column.

The units which have been in process of organization since the last camp will not all be in Canada at that time. Already the 207th Battalion of Ottawa has gone, and three more will in all probability be on the ocean by that time. There is left the 247th Battalion of Peterboro, 252nd Battalion of Lindsay, 253rd Queen's University Highlanders and the 254th Battalion of Belleville. These are recruiting steadily and should be well up to strength in the course of a couple of months. In Ottawa there is now the 257th Railway Construction Battalion. The recruits are pouring into this unit. In view of the urgency with which these kind of units are needed and the fact that practically no training is necessary, would indicate that this command would go direct to England and not to a training camp for any part of the summer.

The rumors are that more battalions will be authorized shortly. These would probably come to the camp for a time at least.

Queen's Field Ambulance Corps now has a strength of 187. This unit was changed this week to No. 15 Canadian Field Ambulance Corps (Queen's), and as soon as it is organized on this basis it will go overseas. There will undoubtedly be a base left however, and this base would go to Barrieheld camp.

Another company to go will be the Special Service Company. The strength of this unit is changing constantly, but it hovers around the 300-mark.

Then in Brockville, Kingston and Rockland there are three companies being formed to reinforce units now overseas. These companies have an establishment of 250 and would probably come into camp at about full strength.

Other units which are left would be the Army Service Corps overseas company of possibly 100, and the Dental Corps with thirty.

MILITARY CIRCLES

At Cornwall these have just joined the Queen's Highlanders: Lloyd Matrice, Farran's Point; Wm. Richardson; Bainsville; Frank Darcy, Wm. Burns, John Sweeney, Claude Aledo, Ottawa; J. A. Marquette, Cardinal; N. St. Hillaire, Iroquois; Harry Murray, Bainsville; Joseph Gilmore, Cornwall; John Hill, Mountain; Chas. Laughlin, Summertown Station.

The blankets, cooking utensils and supplies have arrived for "B" Company, Cornwall, while in barracks. On account of the coal shortage "B" Company has been unable to occupy the barracks for the present, but hope to overcome this obstacle in a few days. Lieut. E. H. Ross, C.A.S.C. is to issue the supplies for the men.

Two men showed their desire to join a good battalion when they walked in Cornwall from Lancaster to don the khaki.

The following members of the 253rd Battalion are on recruiting duty: Pte. P. Durant at Brockville; Pte. J. P. McLean at Quelp; and Ptes. J. H. Daubney and P. C. Miller at Picton.

Major Mills, of the 14th Home Guard, is still asking for a dozen recruits. Here is a chance for some men.

Lieutenant Harold F. Clarke, 25th Battalion, is doing recruiting work in Prince Edward County. He is a native of Wellington, son of the late John Wesley Clarke. He entered the Standard Bank at Wellington some years ago and served at Cobourg, Belleville, Kingston and Chatham and later as manager of the branches at Grafton, Orono and Cannington. When the 235th Battalion was organized in June last he resigned his position, and after qualifying for a commission at the military school at Kingston, was appointed to a lieutenantcy. He went to Wellington in November to do recruiting work, and since that time has secured about twenty recruits.

Word has been received that Bombardier Claude Nelson has been awarded the military medal for bravery at the front. Bombardier Nelson is a son of W. J. Nelson, Peterboro. He went overseas with the 36th Battery, C.F.A.

Within one week of its organization the reinforcing draft for the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., shows a strength of 20 men enlisted to uphold the enviable reputation of the "Iron Second," which is still on the firing line in France in spite of the inevitable gaps. Some of the men already signed up to the draft have had previous experience in the great war. The commanding officer, Capt. S. N. Dansey, was himself an officer in the original 2nd Battalion, and to be a member of his unit is in itself a distinction. Prior to sailing in March this part of 1906 men will have an easy time of it, as their training will be done in England, after which they will join the 2nd Battalion in France.

THEATRICAL NEWS

At Griffin's.

There was another very large and thoroughly satisfied audience at the popular house last evening, as witnessed the second presentation of that wonder picture, "Idle Wives." "The most remarkable photoplay I have ever seen," was the generally expressed opinion as people left the theatre. The other feature, "The Ward of the Locust," with Fanny Ward in the leading role, was also thoroughly enjoyed. The balance of this monster bill, consisting of that great serial, "Shielding Shadow," and other good photoplay subjects, made one of the most complete programmes seen here. The same bill will be shown to-day.

Billie Burke in Peggy.

Eighth part Masterpicture at the Strand first three days of next week. It was a novel experience for Billie Burke when first she saw herself as others saw her, the occasion being the premiere of "Peggy" at the Knickerbocker Theatre in New York. Many a Broadway "first night" had Miss Burke attended, but never before with the expectation of seeing herself on the other side of the footlights. Eagerly Billie awaited "Peggy." When Peggy appeared Billie was highly gratified and also somewhat embarrassed at the burst of applause from her numerous admirers in the audience.

All through the showing of the picture there were similar demonstrations, and at the end a spontaneous outburst that increased in volume until there were insistent demands for a speech. But Miss Burke sat quietly beside her husband. Her cheeks flushed at the tribute, but she remained in her seat until the next picture of the programme had gone far enough to silence the din then hastily departed.
