Invented the Fog Horn.

The man who invented and installed the first steam fog horn died blind and in poverty despite his varied attainments and achievements in widely different fields. He was John Foulis, a Scotchman, who came to St. John, N.B., in the early years of the last century. An interesting description of this versatile Scot is given in a paper recently read before the St. John Historical Society by

Later on, when Mr. Foulis was the engineer of the Light and Signal Service of the Government of New Brunswick, his principal charge being Partrige Island (at the harbor's entrance), whereon was an automobile fog bell, he proposed a steam whistle, steam whistles being then new to the world.

"Later on his suggestion was acted upon. There was no patent law then and, though in his old age, blind and poor, he was given no compensation, and the inventor of the fog horn died
