FISH FAMINE AT OTTAWA

And Lent Has Arrived—What is to Be Done?

Ottawa, Feb. 22.—With the approach of Lent, fish dealers are somewhat worried over the scarcity of the fish supply. There is not a two-days' supply of fish in Ottawa, and the prospects of immediately augmenting this are poor. Ottawa merchants have telegraphed orders all over the country to each centre where fish can be obtained. There orders are being completely ignored. One carload of fish arrived in Ottawa yesterday. It came through from the Pacific coast. It was snapped up within an hour. The Atlantic seaboard has been literally swept clean by the immense export trade to Great Britain during the last six months. When Major Hugh Green was appointed to supply fish to the mother country he hooked orders which left a very small margin of supply with wholesalers from the wholesale houses with whom he dealt.

A pocket knife which has two blades and an attachment that enables it to discharge a 22 calibre short cartridge, either blank or ball, is one of the latest novelties to be placed on the market. It is said to be as effective as a regular 22 calibre revolver of the short-barrel type. It is three inches long and one-half inch wide.

THE CONFESSIONS OF ROXANE
(By Frances Walter)

JANE HEARS HER STORY
(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When I recovered from the horror caused by Jane's revelations of the identity of my captor my curiosity concerning her remained. Who was this woman who knew so much of Harry Pendleton and over whom he had been able to establish such a powerful control? She had promised the night before to tell me about herself, and now again I reminded her of the promise she responded without hesitation.

"My father and Harry Pendleton's father, old Ezra Pendleton, were business partners back in the days when Wall Street was just beginning to become a great financial centre," she began. "My father was the senior partner of the firm, which was known as Edmonston & Pendleton, but my father's methods of conducting his business were too conservative for his more youthful and hot-headed partner, Ezra Pendleton. The result was that there were many disagreements and although the firm held together in some way or other there was at one time a very strong bond of confidence between my father and Ezra Pendleton. As time went on the junior partner disregarded my father's more and more in the conduct of the business, and this finally resulted in a quarrel and agreement to dissolve the partnership. Before the dissolution was effected, however, Ezra Pendleton had engineered a deal on the stock market which involved such great losses to the firm that when the business finally was divided neither partner received more than a few thousand dollars.

"Ezra Pendleton's treatment of my father in this matter broke him not only financially, but physically and mentally. He never attempted to re-enter business, and soon became prematurely old and decrepit. His death soon afterwards was a relief to him.

"Ezra Pendleton, who was much younger than my father, took his few thousand dollars to a bucket shop and in a few months had won back a fortune greater than he had lost. He did not attempt to re-enter business, but retired with his family to a suburb where he built this dwelling in which you are now imprisoned. It is an imposing country residence and at the time it was erected it was considered the handsomest estate in this part of the country.

"Among my father's papers at the time of his death was an envelope addressed to me, his only child. I was then 16 years old. When I opened the envelope I found a brief note addressed to me and another envelope addressed to Ezra Pendleton. This note to me directed me to call a carriage, put all my clothes in it, and drive to Ezra Pendleton's home and hand him the envelope enclosed with my father's note to me. This I did.

"I drove up to the imposing entrance and sent the driver in to summon Mr. Pendleton, who came out immediately and greeted me warmly. I shall never forget his expression as he read my father's note. He turned red and then white and I thought that he was going to choke, but he didn't. He paced up and down beside my carriage for awhile, and then thrust the letter at me. 'Read that,' he said. The letter was very brief, and told Mr. Pendleton very pointedly that, as much as he had ruined my father by gambling on the stock market, my father expected him to provide a home for me.

"What do you think of it?" asked Mr. Pendleton presently.

"I don't think I would like to make my home here," I told him frankly.

"Then I shall see to it that you do," he snapped.

"He clasped his hands together and two servants came running down the front steps. He ordered them to take my luggage out of the carriage and he, himself, assisted me to alight. From that day I became a member of Ezra Pendleton's family.

"There was only one child in the family, Harry, who then was only 5 or 6 years old. He and I soon became as devoted as though we were brother and sister. Neither one of us had anything which we did not wish to share with the other. As we grew older the difference in our ages and Mr. Pendleton's ideas on education resulted in our being separated most of the time. I was sent to a boarding school and Harry was put up at a training school which was expected to fit him to enter the university. But despite this separation we continued to feel as close to each other as though we were of the same family and he insisted on having me spend my vacations wherever he happened to be. I tell you this to show how intimate have been the relations between Harry Pendleton and me."

FOLLOWING THE LINE OF OLD CLEAVAGE

The London Newspapers Discuss the Imperial Preference Report.

London, Feb. 22.—All the morning newspapers yesterday make a feature of the imperial preference report, as the chief news of the day, and also devote their leading editorial articles to it.

The discussion follows the old lines of cleavage. Papers which formerly supported Joseph Chamberlain's tariff reform policy hail the committee's recommendations with enthusiasm and are, in the words of one them, "the breath of the new dawn—the dawn of the day in which a truly national, a truly Imperial policy can flourish."

The opponents of the suggestions of the committee are correspondingly perturbed. They declare that the difficulty of establishing a tariff is even greater now than formerly, because of the interests of the Allies and the necessity of avoiding anything suggesting a post-war threat against neutrals. In this connection one of these newspapers says:

"Our cause already has suffered a good deal in the estimation of Americans because such a threat seemed to be held out by the resolutions of the tariff conference."

The opposing papers also warn against the danger of erecting post-war barriers even against Germany and Austria, whose custom they say is valuable.

"WHY WOMEN CANNOT SLEEP"

The highly organized, finely strung nervous system of women subjects them to terrors of nervous apprehension which no man can ever appreciate.

The peace of mind, the mental poise and calmness under difficulties, which are necessary for happy womanhood, are only possible when the sensitive organism is in a perfectly healthy condition. If there be any derangement in this respect no remedy in the world so completely restores womanly health as the wonderful "Favorite Prescription" invented by Dr. R. V. Pierce.

Chatham, Ont.—"A few years ago I suffered a general break-down and got very weak and thin. I was in an awful state. I was very much discouraged and almost thought I would lose my mind. I knew of Dr. Pierce's medicine so I got it immediately, and completely cured me in a very short time. My sister used it with good results also. She was in a very delicate condition. I got her to take it and two bottles cured her completely.

"I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's medicine; they are all that is recommended of them."—Mrs. MARGARET BRYANT, 87 Park Ave., Chatham, Ont.

WOMEN AS SOLICITORS.

First Reading of Bill Permitted Them to Practise.

London, Feb. 22.—Lord Buckmaster hopes to move the second reading of his bill to enable women to practise as solicitors in the House of Lords on Tuesday. The first reading was given yesterday. The bill does not apply to Scotland or Ireland. If it should pass it would be five years before the first woman solicitor would be qualified. Admission of women to the bar cannot be dealt with in the same way. Women are at present disqualified by statute from admission as solicitors. There is no statutory disqualification to the bar. The decision rests with the Inns Court. The only application of women in recent times for admission as barrister was made by Christabel Pankhurst and was refused.

FARMERS OF SWEDEN BITTER TOWARD HUNS

Stockholm, via London, Feb. 20.—The Swedish Government has asked Berlin for particulars of the sinking of the Swedish motorship Hugo Hamilton, which became known here on Saturday through an official report from Berlin. The vessel which was bought from her Norwegian owners and was making her first trip under the Swedish flag, was bringing 4000 tons of Chile saltpetre from Valparaiso, and was consigned to the Swedish Farmers' Association. Her arrival was eagerly awaited, because the stock of saltpetre in Sweden is virtually exhausted and there is a general scarcity of fertilizer.

The Hugo Hamilton carried a crew of more than 30, and had on board the two young sons of the captain. Whether the vessel was warned is not known, nor is there any information here as to whether any lives were lost.

YPRES THRUST NEXT

The Enemy May Try to Turn Allies' Left Flank.

London, Feb. 22.—The military critic of the Manchester Guardian emphasizes the point that the submarine campaign is the first step in the attempt of Germany to turn the left flank of the Allies, and considers a big German thrust at Ypres or to the sea-almost certain, pending the Champagne attack and merely a diversion made with the hope of breaking up simultaneous Anglo-French offensives.

The Germans are able to act with the greatest secrecy because practically all communication has been cut off since her submarine threat and the subsequent severance of relations with America.

3 Teaspoonsful of Red Rose Tea go as far as 5 Teaspoonsful of ordinary tea

Cheap Tea Not Economical!

Many people complain about the poor flavor of the cheap tea they are using, but are trying to put up with it because they think they are saving money. In reality, cheap tea is rarely more economical, often less economical, than Red Rose Tea. While Red Rose Tea may cost a few cents more, or even 10 cents more per pound, than common tea three teaspoonsful of Red Rose Tea are equal to five, teaspoonsful of common tea.

Less Red Rose Tea is required in the tea pot, because this master blend of Indian-Ceylon teas consists largely of the famous hill grown teas of Assam, India.

These Assam teas excel in vigor, richness and strength. Their leaves yield more liquor and a fuller flavored liquor. Blended with Ceylons they make the ideal tea for flavor and economy.

Try a sealed package of Red Rose Tea and keep count of the extra number of cups it yields in comparison with cheap teas. You will find that Red Rose is worth every cent asked for it—and that it costs no more to use this delightful tea.

Sold Only in Sealed Packages
