POLICE ARE LOOKING FOR MISSING GIRL

Lorraine Goodwin Left Home Where She Was Employed as Domestic.

Lorraine Goodwin, 17 years old, who has for some time been employed as a domestic in a home on University avenue, has been missing since last Thursday night, and the police, with Inspector Jack, of the Children's Aid Society, are endeavoring to locate her.

The missing girl belonged to the Marchmont Home at Belleville, and was secured by a Kingston family referred to. From what can be learned, she left this place last Thursday and after spending the Thursday night at the Y.M.C.A. residence suddenly disappeared.

The matter was first reported to Inspector Jack of the Children's Aid Society on Sunday, and with members of the police force he endeavored to find the missing girl, but without success.

It may be that the girl has hired with other parties, and there is also a chance that she has secured employment out of the city. The authorities of the hope at Belleville are very anxious that they should get trace of the girl.

ONLY TWO ELIGIBLES IN KINGSTON CITY?

The national service registration, as far as Kingston is concerned, has proved a failure, as shown by a return issued on Monday. The return gave the names, addresses and other information about eligibles in what is called "class I-A," meaning unmarried and non-productive men. For Kingston city there are only two men in this class, one being a William street man, classed as a druggist, and one a Johnston street resident, who is a student.

To say that there are only two eligible young men in the city of Kingston is considered ridiculous, and the only solution is that Kingstonians have not been filling in their cards.

Ottawa shows up with ninety-five names, Brockville has about forty names, and Peterboro has eighty-three.

The return is a great disappointment to recruiting officers, who have been looking forward to it as a means to continue renewed efforts.

PECULIAR COURT CASE.

Ten-Year-Old Daughter of Charles Truedell Gives Evidence.

Florence Truedell, the ten-year-old daughter of Charles Truedell, township of Kingston, in the witness box on a case Monday morning, when cross-examined by A. B. Cunningham continued to tell a story that was manifestly wrong. The case showed clearly the extent to which a child's imagination can be carried.

The case was of Charles Truedell vs. Ross Larose, and it proved one of the most interesting cases heard before County Magistrate Bradshaw in some time. The prisoner, who was escorted in by Peter Ritchie, the lately appointed county constable, was charged with setting fire to his clothes in the rooms of the plaintiff, who lives in Kingston township. The girl's evidence was all that was produced by the plaintiff. She said repeatedly that the prisoner had set fire on four occasions to parts of the house, but had escaped before her mother could come into the room.

The prisoner, however, proved that he with his wife and family were visiting at John David's home over a mile and a half away. The case was dismissed.

CANADIAN TRADE WILL SUFFER

As the Result of the British Prohibition of Certain Imports.

$46,000,000 OF TRADE WILL BE CUT OFF IF IT IS ESTIMATED.

List of Commodities Excluded—In Some Cases the Embargo Will Be to the Advantage of Canadians.

Toronto, Feb. 26.—Approximately $46,000,000 worth of Canadian trade with the United Kingdom will be cut off by the prohibition of importations reported by Premier Lloyd George before the British House of Commons. This amount does not represent the value of a miscellaneous variety of goods worth less than $1,000,000.

Toronto business men interested in the prohibited commodities do not express any alarm over the embargo. The effect of the new conditions in some cases will be to the great advantage of Canadians, while in other cases production and distribution will be affected.
