FRENCH PLAY PRESENTED

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE RED CROSS SOCIETY

By the French-Canadians of the City
The sum of Thirty Dollars was Realized.

The French-Canadians of this city gave an enjoyable entertainment on Friday evening last for the benefit of the Red Cross Society. The entertainment began with a dramatic play in two acts entitled, "Jeanne l'Orpheline" ("Jane the Orphan"), which was ably interpreted by the following young ladies: under the direction of Mrs. J. E. H. Howison: Miss Rose Pelletier, Miss Charlotte Howison, Miss Leona Clement, Miss Alice Paquin, Miss Louise Howison and Miss Adelaide Howison. The audience, which comprised quite a few English-speaking friends, was delighted with the play. A good synopsis, in English, of the play, helped those who did not understand French to grasp the action.

Between the acts Miss Adelaide Howison sang a beautiful song entitled, "Mon Soldat" ("My Soldier"). After the play the balance of the evening was spent in playing progressive euchre, for which prizes were given to winners and losers. The first prize for ladies, a jardiniere, was won by Miss Maggie Gallivan. Joseph Sauve won the gentlemen's prize, an umbrella. Miss Marie Anne Pelletier got the consolation prize, composed of half a dozen linen handkerchiefs, and Ernest Grandmont was presented with an ash tray.

The entertainment was well attended, and the receipts of the evening, which amount to $300 will be tendered this week to the Red Cross Society. The French-Canadians are indebted to R. McPaul for the loan, gratis, of curtains used to make up a stage for the play, and to James Reid for the tables required for the euchre party.

BACCALAUREATE

PREACHED IN QUEEN'S CONVOCA-TION HALL BY REV. DR. JORDAN.

Was Inspiring in Character and Helpful to the Graduates—Safety of Young Men Not of Time and Place But of the Soul.

There was a good audience in Queen's Convocation Hall on Sunday morning to hear the baccalaureate sermon by Prof. W. G. Jordan, D.D. It was splendidly conceived and admirably delivered. He took as his text for his discourse the words of the King David II. Samuel xviii, 32: "The young man, Absalom, said: 'His father described the troubles that came upon David in his old age in connection with his constant family. He who had built up a great kingdom found difficulty in ruling his own household. Among the sons of the King, Absalom stands out as an interesting figure, bold, handsome, adventurous. The position of a crown prince was difficult, and in this case it was made more so by the young man's selfishness, his desire for pomp and power. The story of his life has many striking incidents, his revenge upon his brother, his exile, his return to the court and eager bid for popularity, and finally the revolts against his father, which was for a little while successful. The forces of David rallied under Joab and fought a bitter battle. The grim conqueror Joab makes the decision sure by stabbing to the heart the handsome rebel as he hung from a tree by the long hair which had been his pride. Then comes the father's pathetic cry, the messenger from the battlefield. The preacher said that there were many reasons why a young man with such wild ambitions and restless temper could not be 'safe,' but he would mention only three.

1. He wanted to conquer the world and had not conquered himself. Self filled too large a place in his horizon. He thought much about his own position, his beauty, his influence over men, his place in the sun and his share in the limelight. A man of that kind may be clever and brilliant, he may have a run of popularity, but because he did not think deeply enough he failed.

2. He outraged one of the most sacred laws of his nation—respect for the king and reverence for the aged parent. In those days that was an essential element of piety, and men believed that it could not be disregarded with impunity.

3. He was blind to the real forces of life. His father was old and the kingdom seemed to be tottering. As the Germans were told that the British Empire was a feeble old thing needing only one strong blow to break it to pieces, so the men with Absalom thought that David's kingdom would easily fall. But the reality was different, and in the hour of distress there were many who remembered David's good work. Providence had a part for that kingdom to play, and it was not to be blown away by a self-conceited fool.

There is surely a message for us in the question: "Is the young man Absalom safe?" For the young man safety is not of time and place, but of the soul. We cannot put young people in a cage and protect them entirely by external law; there must be in them the principle of the highest life.

There was once a young man who set his face steadfastly to go to Jerusalem, and what was there to be for him there? Popularity and success? No. The Cross! But there he was to find submission to God and service to man. "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister."

What is the greatest glory of Canada just now? Not her large material resources. Not the learning of her teachers or the skill of her statesmen. These have their place and power when honestly used, but the shining reality now is that so many of her young men have set their faces steadfastly towards danger and death because they were convinced that it was the path of duty. "Safety first" may be a very good motto in ordinary affairs, but in the face of world-tragedy this sensible formula shrivels up. President Wilson at one time spoke of the United States as the one great nation that was saving its substance and its strength for its own people, but by the stern logic of events he has come to see that such a course persisted in too long might lead to a contemptible position. "Safety first" may be common prudence or cynical folly.

When this great distress passes the same principles will apply to our common life. To put mere personal safety and success first may lead to real disaster; at least it should not be the policy of those who have had the advantage of university life. Universities were founded by men who were intent on making men more than making money. We must have our daily bread or we cannot live at all. But there is a sphere in which things cannot be measured by money. Dr. David Starr Jordan if really, he said, "it takes $50,000 to kill a German, how many do you want to kill at that rate?" was talking nonsense. It did not take much money to sink the Lusitania, but the deed was not less brutal because it could be done cheaply. You cannot measure the things of the soul in that fashion. Those who go forth to teach the young, the heal the sick, to build railways or to guide society must have more than mere commercial principle. You can choose the life of an Absalom, who was reckless in self-indulgence and self-glory, or you can follow the Christ, who has inspired many of the best of our race to noblest service.

Sergeant A. Fowler Wounded. Signalling Sergeant Arthur Fowler has been slightly wounded in the arm and hip, according to a message received by his parents on Sunday. "Art" went overseas with the 33rd Battery, commanded by Major W. Sears. In England he was transferred to take charge of all the signallers of the 9th Artillery Brigade, and was in that position in France when he was wounded.

The Patriotic Fund Committee in Brockville will reach $63,000 if the council gives the same sum as in 1916.

McMurdo in New Orange Hall. The opening service at New Orange Hall (ground floor) on Sunday evening was in every way a success. The attendance was excellent and the address by Robert McMurdo, Chicago, listened to with the deepest attention and interest. In the congregation there were a number of soldiers, who joined heartily in the singing and remained throughout the whole service. The subject selected by Mr. McMurdo was "The Second Coming of Christ."
