HONORING OF LANGE MARCK DAY

by those who are still here. They are present in spirit to help those who are now fighting the battle in which they so nobly played their part.

Just in the same way we should think of our heroes whom we commemorate today. We have not lost them. They compass us about in a great cloud of witness. To attempt to praise them would be an impertinence. It is quite sufficient to read the baldest story of their acts. Under the most awfullest they stood firm and unflinching. No conceivable horror was absent. Yet they stood firm and if needed, died where they stood. The most sluggish blood is thrilled with the simple story of their quiet heroism. And they who did these things were our kinsmen—our brothers and fathers and sons—men whom we had never thought of as heroes—but the call came, and in simple faith they poured out their life-blood for the cause for which they stood.

Was the price paid too high for the result? Must great traditions always be formed, and national character built up by such tremendous and heart-breaking sacrifice of our best and noblest? It certainly seems true that no great ends are ever achieved without the capacity for infinite sacrifice. That this is God's way is shown by the Christian religion, the centre of which is the Cross, the supreme instance of victory by sacrifice. The most valuable things are only won by those who are willing to give what they hold most dear for them, and the best gift a man can give is himself. Nor are these who have done this to be looked upon as wiped out or obliterated, or even as living in a vague way only in tradition or by the spirit they have implanted. By losing their life they indeed saved it, and though dead they are still in spirit with those for whom they gave all.

The result then of their stupendous sacrifice would only be thrown away if we, while profiting by their action, did not allow it to affect our thoughts and lives, if in short we forgot that they still "compass us about." This Commemoration is nothing but an empty form, if it stops there, our Honor Rolls, our eulogies and banquets are worse than useless, if they make us think that they are enough. Much more is required. There must be the conviction that an obligation has been laid upon us for all time by their sacrifice, an obligation to hate all mean and ignoble and base things—to turn with horror from the hideous self-seeking and greedy materialism which has gripped men's hearts—to loathe ourselves for the manner in which we fall short of their splendid ideal—to remember that they who have seen the vision are looking on. Can we ever let them feel that that we are not touched to the very heart by their sacrifice? Dare we let them see that it is thrown away as the world goes on in its sordid pursuits as before?

I say that they compass us about now. It is they who see the depressing spectacle of numbers who might hear the call and have refused, or even, to their shame be it spoken, fled their country to escape it. But they cannot escape this cloud of witnesses. It is not the living they have to face. It is the great company of the noble dead. They can run away from reproaches now, and shield themselves in various ways. But some day they must meet these heroes whom they dishonour, and then no excuse or subterfuge will avail. They may have gained the whole world. But in that day they will only most bitterly regret that they have lost their souls.

To this great cloud of witnesses that encompasses us continual additions are being made. Each great exploit to become an imperishable part of the traditions and history of our country entails, alas, tremendous sacrifice. A heavy toll is being paid for the glorious victory of Vimy Ridge won by our men this recent Easter tide. But as we lament for these loved ones who have so nobly fallen, surely we may repeat the splendid challenge of the Apostle—"O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" in the confident belief that those so bravely gave their lives are lost to us in no sense of the word, except the actual temporary separation. They are with us still in spirit.

ECZEMA ON FACE Was So Bad Had to Stay in House.

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, eruptions, ulcers, boils, pimples, etc., are all caused by bad blood, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble, and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and well-known remedy, will cleanse the blood of its impurities, and by this means cure skin diseases and other blood troubles.

Mrs. Ernest Andrews, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "My face was covered with eczema and was so terribly bad I had to stay in the house. I had ten different doctors but got no relief from their treatment that I went and bought a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it helped me so I kept on taking it. Now I am cured, and have a lovely skin."

"People who used to see me when I was so bad and see me now will not believe it, but I always tell them that nothing cured me but Burdock Blood Bitters."

spirit. God grant that we may be worthy of them.
Let that then be our final thought. Let their spirit enter into our lives. Let us strive each in our own way to live and die as nobly as we can even as they did. Let us cut out of our lives all that is mean and base, and upgrading. Let us so bear ourselves as conscious of this great cloud of witnesses. Then whatever the ultimate outcome, their sacrifice will not have been in vain. As one tries to sum up what their example teaches us, one finds that the words of St. Paul seem exactly to hit the mark—"Finally brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and of there be any praise, think on these things." "So may it be."

THE DOMINION ALLIANCE

MEETING HELD IN THE Y.M.C.A. HALL ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Splendid Addresses Given By Toronto Speakers—Boy Soprano Was Entertaining.

As part of a grand campaign to educate the people into the advantages of prohibition of the liquor traffic and thus be able to thoroughly understand the situation when they are asked to vote on the subject in 1919, a mass meeting was held in the Y.M.C.A. hall on Sunday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock. Splendid addresses by speakers well versed in their texts, were given by James Simpson, W. Duggan, Rev. Bailey, and Rev. Thompson all of Toronto. Frank Anglin presided and introduced the different speakers.

Mr. Simpson in his forceful speech told of the financial advantages that result from prohibition. He cited the case of slums of Edinburgh where the traffic had persisted at great financial loss to the community as a whole. On purely a commercial basis the prohibition of the liquor traffic was justified.
Rev. Bailey, Mr. Duggan and Rev. Thompson took up various phases of the effect of the traffic on the life of a country particularly a young country like Canada and each urged that active steps be taken to prevent any attempt on the part of politicians to bring about similar conditions to those which prevailed before September 16th last.

During the afternoon Master William Bennett, the famous Toronto boy soprano gave several solos which were well received and deserved the continued applause.

Many of the churches had their pulpits filled by the visiting temperance advocates.

NOW ADJUTANT SMITH

At the memorial service in the Salvation Army Citadel on Sunday afternoon it was announced that Commissioner Richards had promoted Ernest Smith to the rank of Adjutant for his splendid and successful work for the local corps.

Funeral of Late N. Mosler.
The funeral of the late Nicholas Mosler, who died on Friday, took place on Sunday afternoon to the Church of the Sacred Heart, Wolfe Island, where a solemn Mass was sung by Rev. Fr. Fleming. There were over eighty rigs in the cortege. The pall-bearers were A. C. Hugh, William Halley, Oliver and Robert Yott, Thomas Dee and George Todd.

Collegiate Lost.
The Kingston Collegiate Institute team were unsuccessful in defending the championship against the London Collegiate Institute team on Saturday evening for the basketball championship of Canada. They went down to defeat by 76 to 25. It was one of the hardest contests yet entered into.

Hair Coming Out?

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little into your hand and rub it into the scalp. After a few applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff.
