A Call to Wake Up.

Get out of the leisure-loving class and heed your country's call for increased food production. Cultivate your back garden or vacant lot, grow your own vegetables and help relieve the terrible strain on the regular sources of supply.

Remember, famine and world-hunger are on the threshold. While forty million men are locked in a death struggle, the food crisis must be met by those at home. The empire's untold sacrifices will have been in vain if Germany with its submarines starves Britain. Every individual can help prevent this by working the soil.

The man with leisure moments, who devotes his time to sport or pleasure, instead of answering the cry for food, is just as disloyal as the husky young man, fit for fighting, who does not enlist.

Join the Kingston Garden Club and do your bit. This is not a fad, but an absolute necessity. We must produce more food.

THEATRICAL NEWS

At The Grand.

A large audience was well pleased with the enjoyable show presented at the Grand last night. Nance O'Neil was starred in "The Love Question," and proved her claim as America's greatest emotional actress. The scenes of this thrilling play are laid in Mexico during a revolution and some wonderful battle scenes are shown. The supporting cast is of sterling caliber and includes Stuart Holmes, Macey Harlan, and Jane Miller. The remaining pictures include "The Trials of a Movie Cartoonist," "Superstitious Ceylon," the latest Pathe Weekly, and "Steel Hearts" in two reels, featuring Marie Walcamp. Will Adams, the musical ventriloquist, gave a very pleasing act, and Thompson & Griffin, acrobatic comedians, presented some new and novel tumbling feats. This same bill will be repeated to-night, and to-morrow matinee and night. Coming Monday, Billie Burke, in "Gloria's Romance," "Patty Arbuckle, in "The Butcher Boy," Harold Lockwood, and May Allison in "The Promise."

At Griffin's.

"Beulah," the famous novel from the pen of the great Southern author, Augusta J. Evans, is the latest literary masterpiece to be filmed, and attracted a capacity house at Griffin's last evening, where it was shown for the first time in this city. The cast is representative of the finest talent of England and America; Henry B. Walthall, the recognized leader of American film stars plays the stellar male role, while Miss Joyce Moore, who has been termed "the Bernhardt of the English movies," essays the difficult part of Beulah. The novel has been translated into nearly every language in which fiction is published. The story of Beulah is one which has tugged at the heart strings of all. As a story it possesses the emotional appeal of "Camille," without the improprieties of the French work, and its character drawings are strongly suggestive of Thackeray's master hand. Not one jarring or unpleasant note attended the film's first showing on Broadway. The press and public were unanimous in their approval, and this picture will no doubt duplicate its original success here. Not content with offering the patrons of Griffin's a masterpiece production such as "Beulah," the management has also been fortunate enough to secure the latest success of the popular favorite Vivian Martin, "The Wax Model," and this picture was last night pronounced by many present to be one of the prettiest and most charming seen upon the screen in some time. Miss Martin plays the part of the most popular model in London, and in this splendid production she is given a wonderful opportunity to display some of the most exquisite gowns of the current mode. Besides the above feature pictures there will be shown the popular Musical Weekly and other good substantial pictures to complete a first class programme in every respect. This bill will be shown this evening and to-morrow afternoon and evening.

At the Strand.

The bill presented at this popular playhouse last evening was well received by the large audience present. "The Gilded Cage," with Alice Brady in the title role being the headline attraction. This is a story that thrills and throbs. It moves swiftly from start to finish without a single lagging moment. Alice Brady is seen to wonderful advantage. The fourth episode of "A Lass of the Lumberlands," featuring Helen Holmes; a comedy cartoon entitled "Matt and Jeff" in "A Hoek Shop"; other comedy reels and Jim Kane in an up-to-date singing act round out a well balanced programme that will be repeated to-night and Saturday.
