AGED MAN IN THE TOILS

HE WAS FINED $212.50 FOR VIOLATING TEMPERANCE ACT.

Story of a "Joy Ride" That Had a Very Sad Ending—Woman in Case Fainted in the Police Court Room.

The Ontario Temperance Act was violated in no slight manner on Thursday by Thomas McGuinness, an aged man, and he paid the penalty for it in the police court on Friday morning. He had a triple charge to answer to when arraigned before Magistrate Farrell, that of being drunk, having liquor in a place other than his own private dwelling, and with giving liquor to one, Mrs. Mary Bowman, in a public place.

On the charge of being drunk he was fined $10 and costs, but as the having and giving the liquor in a public place was practically the same offence, he was let off with a fine of $200 and costs to cover the two charges, or a grand total in fines of $212.50.

"I am giving you the minimum fine," remarked Magistrate Farrell, "and it is because of your age I am doing so, and also because of the frank manner in which you gave your story."

The police court case followed a little "joy ride" the accused, in company with Mrs. Bowman, took on Thursday night in a taxi. Mr. McGuinness supplied the liquor. Mrs. Bowman was placed under arrest near the corner of Barrack and Wellington streets about two o'clock on Friday morning by Constable Thos. Mullinger, who also rounded up McGuinness a short time afterwards.

Mrs. Bowman swore that she went out in a taxi with McGuinness, and that he gave her liquor. The accused said he had been taking some liquor for a cold, and he did not remember anything that had occurred. All he could remember was that he left his home about 8 o'clock Thursday night, and took a walk across Cataragui bridge. After this his mind appeared to be a blank. Not so with Mrs. Bowman, however, as she told about the auto ride she had up Princess street and around side streets, with liquor refreshments. A half-filled bottle was brought into court as evidence, and Mrs. Bowman recognized this as the one which had figured in the celebration.

Mrs. Bowman was very ill as a result of "the night out," and fainted away twice while in the court room, and had to receive special attention from the police matron, Mrs. Smith, after which one of the stalwart police constables carried her out of the room. Owing to her condition, the magistrate remanded her for a day.

SCHOOL DAYS ARE OVER.

Classes Dismissed For the Vacation on Friday Afternoon.

School is out. Friday afternoon the classes were dismissed for the summer vacation and they were a happy lot of youngsters who filed out of the schools at 4 o'clock. The closing was of a very quiet nature, following the usual custom for the summer vacation.

The senior class in the Portsmouth school had a little start on the city schools as it was closed on Tuesday, owing to the fact that the teacher, Mrs. Gambia, had to go to Cataragui school to look after some examinations. The junior classes conducted by Miss Eason were dismissed on Friday afternoon.

CARTERS MUST VACATE

Protest Against Order to Move From Stand.

A deputation from the carters, who have been using Brock street, below Ontario as a stand, waited on the Whig on Friday morning to air their troubles.

They were notified by the police on Friday that twenty-four hours was given them to vacate and now they say there is no place left for them to go.

Up to a few days ago the carters had a neat little shack built to hold their telephone but this shack has been torn down. The trunk-movers thought that their homes and wagons could still remain at the unused end of the lawn. The Cape Vincent steamer is not in the city and there is very little traffic on the part of the street used and they consider it unjust that the police should act after the last meeting of the session of the city council, to which they could appeal.

LADY GOES DOWN GRATE.

The Grate Slipped Up and She Slipped Down.

A local young lady had the misfortune to fall into a grate opening on Friday morning, but fortunately did not suffer any injuries beyond a cut on her right arm and some bruises. The lady was going to work about eight o'clock and passed behind a merchant who was using a hose. She walked on the grate, from the side of which the hose was protruding. The grate slipped up and the young lady slipped down.
