

ASK FOR A QUARTER OUNCE OF FREEZONE

Any Corn Will Dry Up and Lift Out Says a Cincinnati Authority

Let folks step on your feet hereafter; wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is said to simply shrivel up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue.

It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce obtained at any drug store will cost very little, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Cut this out, especially if you are a woman reader who wears high heels.

POOR BLOOD AND WEAK NERVES

(By F. Raymond Ward, M. D.)

Lack of strength is about the first symptom of violation of the laws of health. There come nervousness, unsteady hands and limbs, skin eruptions, dizziness, sleeplessness, heart palpitation, and with the feeling that the life force is being sapped comes complete prostration. In this condition the sufferer is indifferent to all things—and looks upon life with a gloomy, melancholic view.

It is given as a statistical fact that seven out of every ten people in the United States are suffering from nerve exhaustion, and of this number less than half realize it. They know that they have it, but they do not know the cause, and therefore they do not know the means of curing more misery and crushing more hopes than any other trouble that flesh is heir to.

Nervous exhaustion will not cure itself. The sufferer who thinks that nature alone will bring about a restoration of health is simply deluded by a false hope. He will realize that (if the power of realizing is left him), when he becomes a hopeless victim to one of the many diseases which follow in its path.

Those suffering from nerve exhaustion or loss of energy as a result of overwork, mental worry or violation of nature's laws are quickly restored to normal health by Dr. Ward's special treatment. Dr. Ward's office is located at 75 Niagara Square, Buffalo, N. Y., which is right opposite the McKinley Monument. His office hours are Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., and Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. Consultation and examination is always without charge.

WHIG TELLS OF CONFEDERATION

A Discussion on a Suitable Name For the United Provinces.

MANY WERE SUGGESTED

DR. EDWARD JOHN BARKER WAS EDITOR IN STORMY TIMES.

The Current History of Confederation is Found in the Whig of 1867—A Retrospect of the Editor.

It may not be generally known in this generation that previous to July 1st, 1867, it was not known what the name of the confederated provinces of Canada would be. The ministers who presented the matter to the Imperial Parliament for ratification had a diplomatic piece of work to perform and they accomplished it with much delicacy. The 1867 files of the Daily British Whig have a most interesting record of this all important period in Canadian history. The journal was then a strong Conservative organ edited by Dr. Edward John Barker and was a staunch supporter of John A. Macdonald.

In the journal speculation is rife on many of the aspects of what would be the provisions of the new confederation bill. Perhaps the most interesting of these was what name should be chosen for the confederated provinces and the issues contained many letters to the editor suggesting names for the new commonwealth.

"Canada" is Meaningless.

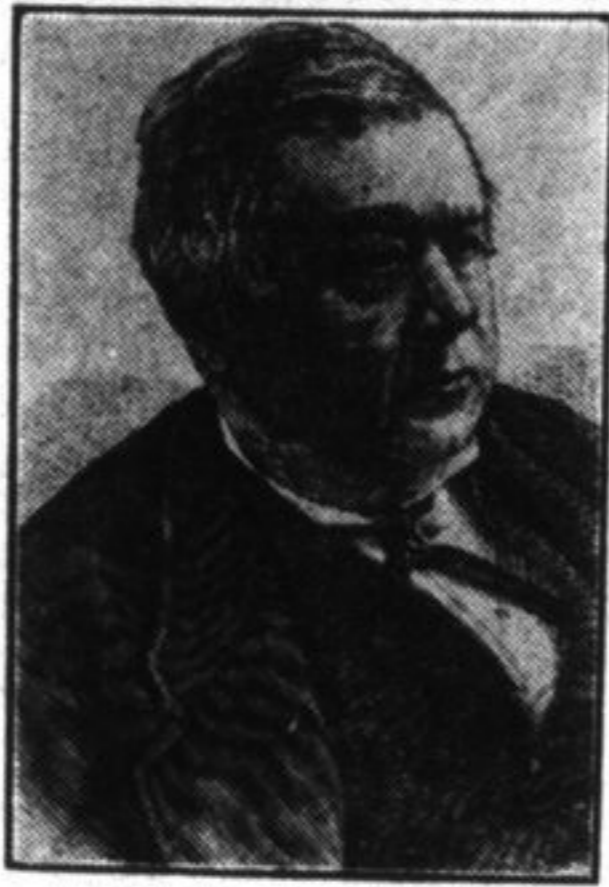

In the issue of February 7th appears the following editorial comment: "The Canadian news tells us that the name of the Confederated Provinces is to be left to the Queen's choice. This of course means to the Queen-in-Council. The same authority also says that 'Canada' is likely to be the name. We hope not, for it is a word of no meaning. Let the choice be made of a name that will mean something."

Opposed to "Canada." Dr. Barker then was opposed to leaving the name "Canada" for he felt that it would mean nothing to the future generations. He does not say but perhaps he had in mind some word that would convey to the world what Canada was and what he hoped it would be. In his most felicitous moments, however, we doubt if he could have realized what the Canada of our time would be like. He could not have seen in those days before the Dominion of Canada was in being a strong, virile nation, arising from the efforts of the men he so strongly supported and from the Grits who so ably help them. He could not have realized four hundred thousands of young Canadians rallying to the call of the motherland in the common defence against a ruthless foe. He could not have foretold the improvements, the educational institutions, and the progress which has taken place in this land in the last fifty years. It is for us, the living, to recognize what has been done in the last five decades by our men in attempting to bring a happiness and truthfulness in our national life, and it is for the younger generation and the generations that are yet to come to be stimulated and inspired when they see the progress that has been made since the first days of confederation.

Why Not Columbia?

A correspondent of the Whig sends to the editor a long letter in which he expresses the wish that the new confederation should be called Columbia. He deplors the fact that the discoverer of the American continent, Christopher Columbus, had not been officially recognized in the land he found, and it is his opinion that the northern part of the continent should be named Columbia and that we should be called Columbians.

The Kingdom of Canada. The first draft of the bill which was sent to Canada was received by the Toronto Globe and in it the name of the confederation was found to be "The Kingdom of Canada." On this Dr. Barker has to say editorially:

"The Kingdom of Canada—it sounds big, but why not? The United Provinces of British North America would be too cumbersome. The State of Canada would be too Yankee-sounding—and the Province of Canada would be a misnomer because the new Kingdom will be composed of many provinces. So after all Kingdom is the only proper designation. The Queen adds another to her many titles—Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, Canada and Empress of India. She has only a Governor-General over her immense Indian Empire and she is satisfied with having a Governor-General in Canada."

When it was later found that the report of the Globe had been erroneous in this regard, and that the united provinces were likely to be called the Dominion of Canada, Dr. Barker editorially says:

"Kingdom or Dominion—that is the question. The first sounds better and is more appropriate, but the latter may give less offence to democratic minds, and more particularly to those on the other side of the line. But why should they be minded? What significance is it to them what Canada is, they'll never lay their greedy, unsonny paws upon a foot of it. At least not while Great Britain protects Canada, Kingdom or Dominion. It is not certain what the future designation will be. The

Rheumatism Entirely Gone

After twenty-seven years of Suffering—Swelling and Puffiness Has Disappeared—Not a Pain or an Ache Left.

Kincardine, Ont., June 28—A most astonishing cure of rheumatism and eczema has been reported here, and Mrs. Ray is enthusiastic in telling her many friends how cure was effected. Rheumatism and eczema frequently go together, and in this case caused the most keen distress imaginable. All the swelling and puffiness resulting from many years of rheumatism have disappeared, and there is not a pain or an ache left.

Mr. G. H. Ray, R.R. No. 1, Kincardine, Ont., writes: "Mrs. Ray has been using your Kidney-Liver Pills. She was very bad with rheumatism and eczema, and had had that fearful itch for twenty-seven years. It was simply terrible what she suffered. I persuaded her to try $1.00 worth of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, she is now on the last box, and let me tell you she scarcely knows herself, she is so free from both these diseases. All the swelling and puffiness caused by the rheumatism has gone away, and she has gained in weight 18 1/2 pounds. She never has an ache nor pain, biliousness nor sick headache all these months. She often says herself 'How glad I am that I know what to do instead of paying doctors so much to make me worse.' There is only one way that the poisons in the blood can be cleaned away and the cause of pains and aches removed, and that is by the healthful action of the kidneys, liver and bowels. Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills act directly and specifically on these organs and ensure their activity they remove the cause of rheumatism and other dreadfully painful and fatal diseases. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

house bill says Dominion—Mr. Gordon Brown says Kingdom." It must be realized in reading this comment that relations between Canada and United States were strained at this time over some events in the Civil War and over the incursions of the Fenians into this country.

But that Dr. Barker was not ready for annexation nor that he was willing to relinquish Canadian dependency to the British Crown can be seen from an editorial under the heading "A King for Canada" which he wrote later: "The New York Tribune advocates the consolidation of all British America into a Kingdom with one of Victoria's boys for King."

"What rot! Is not her present Majesty Queen enough for us? It will be time enough to have one of Victoria's boys when the throne becomes vacant."

The Fenian Taunts. At this time, 1867, the outstanding questions of the day were the confederation of the provinces and the Irish question. The Fenian raids were turning the Canadians against the Yankees and the following taunt from the New York Sun drew a stirring editorial of some length from the patriot, Dr. Edward John Barker. The editorial in the Sun ran as follows and showed the feeling that existed at the time:

"If the Fenians prove as successful in the next venture as their confidence indicates they will, the Canadians may be saved the trouble of continual discussion about the name they shall give to their new confederation. Instead of 'Kingdom of Canada' the name chosen for them may be 'New Ireland' or the 'Province of Hibernia.'"

The Editor Himself. From these few extracts can be seen what were the tendencies and thoughts of the time. From the old editorials and news items of a newspaper can be gleaned the clearer conception of the public opinion of the day and it is also an interesting way of learning history.

The Whig of 1867, while only a four page journal gives a stirring account of the domestic, national and international life, and in it can be seen the guiding hand of the first editor, a dauntless hand clenched for right and justice but always ready to be extended for peace and good will; a patriot's hand ready in the first days of the Dominion to stand for principle above politics. The character of an editor can be found in his editorials and in the trenchant remarks of Dr. Barker can always be seen a true Canadian cognizant of the highest principles of morality and righteousness. The motto of his paper was "opifer per orbem ditor." His own motto should have been, "duci am patriam."

INTERESTING DESCRIPTION

Of the Way the Canadians Performed at Vimy Ridge.

Lance-Corpl. Morley Parrott, 38th Battalion, gives an interesting description of the Vimy Ridge fight. "We were all lined up in a small assembly trench on April 9th, at 5 a.m. It was raining a little bit, and Fritz was shelling some with whizzbangs and a few five point pines, causing a few casualties."

"A Company was ahead in the old front line, and our Assembly trench was about thirty yards behind us another western battalion. No. 9 platoon was the second line."

"We all sat huddled up in little bunches waiting for the barrage to open up. The officer came along with a jar of rum and gave us all a small issue, just to give us a little Dutch courage. After waiting about fifteen minutes in suspense, someone back of the line behind us blew a whistle, and 64 machine guns opened up on our front. Then the ground gave an awful par like a small earthquake, and an enormous mass of flames leapt into the air. We had sprung a mine, and then it seemed that hell was let loose. All the guns back of the line opened up. The 18 pound batteries were using all overhead shrapnel, and the heavy guns were playing on the German batteries. Well, we are off. Line after line of men in the early morning, with our bayonets fixed, and rifles slung over our shoulders. Some men were even smoking cigarettes. No one was at all dubious of the main issue. The finest sight, and yet the most awful, was to see the bursting shells in the air, and the Boche putting up artillery signals of all colors. Men stuck in shell holes, and unable to help themselves, some caught in barbed wire, some were wounded and some were killed, and yet the main body went on, a wild mass of surging men."

"There were no Germans at all in the front line, and only a few in the second. When we arrived at the craters, which we had shown to us from aerial photographs, someone shouted in my ear that this was where we were to dig in. I ran down in No. 5 crater, and found three dug-outs. I yelled down one dug-out, and up came fifteen scared German sappers saying 'Mercy Kamerad,' and dropping their belts and revolvers, and making their way out as fast as they could. The Western battalion had gone on ahead, and taken the first line, and the prisoners wanted to come back in swarms. We all made ourselves busy for the rest of the day, digging in and preparing for the counter attacks which we expected. But there was only one very feeble attempt which was easily beaten back. The hardest part of the advance was getting the positions consolidated and connecting up the lines but in the end it was finally accomplished, and after five days we were relieved by imperial troops, and they in their turn, also 'Went over the top.'"
