THE THIRD U.S. CONTINGENT SAFE

Arrives in France After Being Attacked by Submarines.

GERMAN PLUNGERS SUNK

WHEN THEY ATTACKED VESSEL OF UNCLE SAM.

Exciting Experiences With Submarines in Atlantic—No American Vessel Damaged and No Soldier Lost.

A French Seaport, July 2.—(Delayed.)—The last units of the American Expeditionary Force, comprising vessels loaded with supplies and horses, arrived here to-day, amid the screeching of whistles and moaning of sirens. Their coming, one week after the first troops landed, was greeted almost as warmly as the arrival of the troops themselves, because it meant complete success of the undertaking.

The Troopships Attacked. Washington, July 4.—At least one and probably more German submarines were sunk in two attacks made by them last week on the rear contingent of the Pershing Expeditionary Force proceeding to France under convoy of American warships.

The Germans made their first attack in force the night of June 22nd, at 10.30 o'clock at a point far out in the Atlantic Ocean which was presumably free from submarines. The convoy protected the transports by using their big guns so effectively that the torpedo fire in even as much as scattered and ineffective. The second attack was made by German submarines beyond the rendezvous where the transports and their convoy were to be picked up by U. S. destroyers sent out by Vice-Admiral William S. Sims to furnish additional protection for them through the submarine war zone.

The results of this, the first important battle between American and German naval forces in the war, was a victory for the former. The attack failed to result in even as much as the scoring of a hit against the American vessels by the German submarines. One U-boat is known to have been lost and the reports to the Navy Department indicate that more of them were destroyed. Not only was no American vessel hurt, but no American life was lost in transporting the first large force of American soldiers to France.

Germans Laid Careful Plans. The German Admiralty is believed to have taken extraordinary precautions to play havoc with the American transports. It is the belief of naval officers here that the lull in the German submarine warfare that immediately preceded the sailing of the expedition was caused by the calling in of German submarines for refitting with torpedoes and supplies as part of a campaign in which they hoped to slaughter a large number of the American troops in the first large contingent sent to France, for the moral effect of such a victory.

Vice-Admiral Sims was in charge of the arrangements for the protection of the expedition. He was placed in command of all the war vessels in Irish waters and given full responsibility for the protection of the expedition.

MURDER IS ALLEGED. James Gallagher, Marmora, Killed With a Shovel.

Marmora, July 4.—As the result of being struck on the head with a shovel, James Gallagher, of Marmora township, a pathmaster of that township, is dead, and Samuel Rogers, 18 years old, has been committed for trial at Belleville on a charge of causing Gallagher's death.

It appears that Gallagher and Rogers were working together in a gravel pit and during the day quarrelled considerably.

The victim of the unfortunate affair had lived in Marmora township all his life, where he was well and favorably known. He was about thirty-five years of age and unmarried.
