UNASSISTED TRIPLE PLAYS

ARE AS SCARCE AS FUZZ ON A BILLIARD BALL.

Ten Are Recorded in History of Baseball and Only Two in the Major Leagues.

The unassisted triple play is just about as scarce as the fuzz on a billiard ball, and you'll admit that is "some" scarce. In the many years that baseball records have been kept there have been ten unassisted triple plays recorded, and only two of the ten were made in the major leagues.

The records of unassisted triple plays came in for a lamping recently when Phil Cooney, second baseman of the Omaha Western League club, pulled off one of the triple killings unassisted in a game at Denver. Cooney was playing second base for the Omaha club, and there were men on both first and second when he caught a line drive. He tagged the runner who was coming from first base when the ball was hit, and then hopped back on second in time to retire the runner who had left that station for third base.

Records show it to be the first triple play unassisted that has ever been made in the Western League, and the tenth in the history of baseball. Cooney's play was also the first to occur in five years, the last being made by Player Foreman, at Kankakee, Ill., in 1913.

Paul Hines, of the old Providence (National League) club, was the first player in the history of the organized game to pull off an unassisted triple made at Providence way back in May of 1878, and there elapsed a period of 24 years before the second unassisted triple play on record. Harry O'Hara, of the Eastern League club made the second play of this kind at Jersey City in August, 1902. Aside from Hines, Neal Ball is the only major league player to pull off the play. Ball made his unassisted triple play at Cleveland in July of 1909.

Players Miller, Cruise and Long of the St. Louis Cards pulled off a triple steal at Boston this season, which caused the league to dig into the records of the National League.

Said scribe found that it was the first triple steal ever made in the old league and the fourth made in the history of the major league baseball. So the triple steal is even more scarce than the unassisted triple play.

The American League records show that three triple steals have been made by its players. The first on record in the younger circuit occurred in 1905, when Sugden, Padden and Burkett of the Browns worked a triple theft on the Athletics. In 1908 Oldring, Goombs and Davis of the Macs scored a triple steal against Washington. The third in the American League came in 1916, when Johnson, Austin and Sizer of the Browns, pulled the play against Detroit.

Cobb Still on Top.
With a average of .339, George Sisler, the youthful first-base star with St. Louis, has batted his way to second place in the American League, displacing Tris Speaker, according to unofficial averages published. Ty Cobb is safely out in front with .375.

Cobb's speed in running bases has given him possession of scoring honors. He has crossed the plate 52 times in 77 games. The Georgian also leads in total bases hitting, having driven out 149 hits for 163 bases. Twenty of his blows were doubles, thirteen triples and three home runs.

MAY TRANSFER TO NORFOLK

Montreal Magnate Seriously Considering This Move.

President Sam Lichtenhein of the Montreal baseball team of the International League announces that he is giving serious consideration to a proposal from baseball interests at Norfolk, Va., for the transfer of the team to that city for the balance of the season. The Norfolk interests pointed out that they had a stand with seating accommodations for 4,000 people, and that baseball there was a much stronger attraction than it had proven in Montreal in the past couple of months. The present season is considered the worst that the Royals have ever had in the way of attendance, and already the club is $20,000 behind on the season's operations.

Doyle, Carrigan, or Needham His Probable Successor.

Although it would be unfair to blame Manager William Donovan for the failure of the New York Highlanders, it is said on the best of authority that he will not be retained when his contract expires in the fall. It is understood that President Johnson of the American League will support the owners of the team when they decide to engage a new manager. For several days Col. Ruppert has been conferring with President Johnson in Chicago. They have talked over the wire with Capt. Huston, who is with the 4th Regiment of Engineers in Detroit, and it is reported that several candidates for Donovan's place have been discussed. Foremost among these candidates is Larry Doyle, former captain and second baseman of the Giants, who now is a member of the Cubs, but is nearing the end of his active career as a player.

If Doyle isn't the final selection for Donovan's place, two other well-known baseball field marshals will be considered. One of them is William Carrigan, former leader of the Red Sox, who retired last winter. The other is Thomas Needham, who is managing the Newark International League team. It is known that Johnson is strong for both Carrigan and Needham, while Messrs. Ruppert and Huston at present are inclined to favor Doyle, who is highly regarded by them, and has been well recommended by influential baseball men.

Results count in baseball, so that Ruppert and Huston, who never have made money out of the Highlanders, believe that Donovan must go. But in selecting another team leader, they are moving slowly and deliberately. Donovan has encountered many obstacles, and never has complained. He has blamed nobody for the team's fall from grace. Caldwell's misconduct was not due to Donovan's mismanagement, for the erratic pitcher simply repeated the tricks that first got him in trouble with Frank Chance. No manager can have accomplished more with the Klittie than "Wild Bill" under the trying circumstances.

A WONDERFUL COME-BACK

After Losing National Title He Breaks a Record.

Frank Kramer is the most remarkable athlete in the world. Beaten for a championship he has defended successfully for sixteen years, apparently losing the "jump" that made him king of all cycle racing men. Admitting that he is becoming a little less pep, Frank has made one of the most successful come-backs on record.

It isn't often that a cyclist can break a world's record after sixteen years of steady competition. Kramer's new half-mile of 5 1/2 seconds will probably stand for a while.

The only other professional athlete whose record-breaking performances compare well with Kramer's is big Tom Carroll, the professional weight-thrower. Carroll held about his king of world's records in throwing different weights. He began competing as a weight-thrower, professionally, when he was eighteen years old. On his forty-fifth birthday he competed in the events of an especially arranged programme, and succeeded in breaking every one of his own world's records. He trained for that event for several months. He hasn't broken any records since, but is still, at sixty-three years of age a consistent winner in his favorite events, and not far below his championship form.

STILL DILLY-DALLYING AROUND.

After hearing the testimony of one of Manager McGraw's Pittsburgh witnesses, who was subjected to a grueling cross-examination by counsel for the baseball writers, the rehearing of the McGraw case was adjourned until next Friday morning. McGraw's other witness was said to be away on a fishing trip, and Chairman Toole decided to give the New York Club's manager another week in which to procure corroboration of the testimony given by the witness. The point of importance established by the Pittsburgh man was that he fixed the time when McGraw was interviewed and later received the manuscript from the baseball writer, whom McGraw afterward discredited.

GRAVATH AND PIPP BATTLE FOR CROWN

They Are the Leading Home Run Hitters in Major Leagues.

Wallop Pipp of the Yankees, and Gavy Cravath of the Phillies, are staging a pretty race for the title of home run king in the major leagues this season. Up to July 17 Cravath had the lead on his American league rival, having poked out seven homers, against an even half dozen for Pipp, but the season is just half over, and between now and the first of October the Yankee star has time aplenty to catch up.

There is little room for doubt that Cravath and Pipp are destined to be crowned as the home run kings of their respective leagues this season for both are so far ahead of would-be kings of the "run homes" that they can scarcely be overhauled. Pipp has an advantage over Cravath because of his youth and his speed. He can circle the bases much faster than Cravath, who often pulls up at third base these days on hits that would have been homers for him in the heyday of his career when his legs were nimble.

NEW PITCHERS GOING GOOD

Sothoron and Cadore Are the Real Finds.

Two newcomers in major league pitching ranks this season are showing themselves capable of an unusual amount of work, but getting little mention.

They are Allan Sothoron, of the Browns, and Leon Cadore, of the Dodgers. Pitching averages, which include games of July 11th, show that Sothoron has won nine out of 15 games for St. Louis, while Cadore has captured eight of 15 for the Dodgers.

Neither of these pitchers was expected to shake up the big circuits with surprise when the season opened, yet both are consistent, and as the season advances they are improving.

Ferdie Schupp, the wonder pitcher of the Giants, is the leader of the National, and Williams, of the White Sox, the leader in the American. Schupp has 11 victories and two defeats to his credit, while Williams has nine and three.

Sim Love, of the Yankees, still has no defeats, but he works only at intervals. "Babe" Ruth, Eddie Cicotte and Stanley Coveleski are running a great race to decide who is the champion iron man of the league. Ruth has 13 victories and leads the trio.

In the National league Fred Toney, with 15 victories, is three games ahead of his nearest competitor in games won. Jim Vaughn, of the Cubs, and Alexander, of the Phillies, both have won 12 games.

Mathewson a Real Manager.

Christopher Mathewson is a big league manager, sure enough. He is making the Cincinnati Reds play faster ball than ever before. The Reds have climbed from the slough of despond into the first division and the end is not yet. Big Six has accomplished several important things. He has established harmony. He has induced Hal Chase to play the game of his life. He has developed Eddie Roush into one of the best hitters in the National League. Furthermore, Matty has built up a fine staff of pitchers, including Toney, Schneider, Mitchell, Regan, King, Eller and Keitzer. Heinie Groh and Billy Kopf are performing miracles in the infield, while Wingo and Clarke are catching excellently.
