Letters to the Editor

Less Narrow Minded Bigotry.
Kingston, July 18.—(To the Editor): July 12th, 1917, is past and gone. The speeches of the brothers were very good, British and mild, modulated and sharp of much of that creed bitterness of by-gone years. The words of the Master is taking effect. "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."
Dr. Edwards went after the clergy of Quebec. He may have some reason for doing so. But I want to tell the doctor that the most of these men are Tories and Nationalists like his friends, Sevigny, Bourassa, et al. In 1896, in pre-election campaign, twelve archbishops, and bishops sued an open letter to the people of the French diocese not to support Laurier nor the Liberal party policy but to be good Tories and vote with Tupper. This letter was read in every church the Sunday before election day in all parishes governed by those bishops. Even in Ontario where some of them governed parishes, it was read.
So the doctor should not say too much about his French Tory allies. It is my opinion that the doctor is doomed to keep up agitation among the people in Ontario like Bourassa in Quebec. The people of Ontario and the good Orangemen cannot be led about by the nose and made to vote the same old Tory ticket believing there is treason lurking in every Catholic neighborhood. They know their Catholic neighbors better, now on account of more mingling together, and less narrow-minded bigotry among all races of people. Education in rural districts is better and people are better educated and wise to the fact, and will not be fooled by ranting politicians. Yours,
—JAMES TRAVERIS.

LAI D ALONGSIDE GERMAN WIRE

Was For Twenty-Four Hours in a Shell Hole.

PTE. KEITH M'LAUGHLIN

FORMERLY OF ATHENS, DUBBED "SHELL HOLE PTE."

Tells of Long Vigil—Advancing Infantry Found Artillery Had Failed to Obliterate Enemy's Wire.

"Shell Hole Pete" is what his comrades now call Pte. Keith M'Laughlin, an old Athens boy, who is serving in France with the Cameron Highlanders, of Winnipeg. He has been dubbed thus for his experience in a recent engagement in lying for nearly 24 hours in a shell hole just outside the German wire and from which the voices of the Germans could be heard. Pte. M'Laughlin, who went west at the age of 17 to teach school, enlisted at Christmas, 1914, and has been on the front for an extended period. The story of his long vigil is told in a letter from him appearing recently in a Winnipeg paper referring to the death of a fellow soldier, Lance-Corporal Reid Howden, son of Hon. J. H. Howden, former Attorney-General of Manitoba. The letter is one of the most realistic and feeling that has come from the front for some time; every sentence is tinged deeply with the tragedy of the war. The letter reads:

"We had made two previous trips in this part of the line and Reid (Howden) was given his stripes because of his coolness and courage. You know it is quite an honor to get stripes on the field far more than in England and Canada. We all went up for that third trip with smiles on our faces, though everyone's heart was heavy, for they all knew most of them would never come back. Our son seemed to know something would happen and gave a few francs, part of his pay, to his friend, Harry, who worked on the cook kitchen. We went into the line Saturday night and we knew we were going over Sunday morning. All Saturday we lay in the muddy front line while the artillery on both sides shelled heavily. At 4.30 on Sunday it seemed as if every gun on earth opened up and we shelled the enemy's trench for ten minutes and then lifted for his supports.

As the artillery lifted our first wave advanced, and we were in this wave; then the second wave followed and after that the third. Of course, the Germans immediately saw them and then a regular hell on earth started—shells were crashing, bombs exploding, rifles cracking away, and the machine guns working. In fact you would not believe anything could live there. We lost a great number of men going over. I was supposed to be in the third wave, but through excitement we went too fast and got into the first wave. Then we ran into his wire, which was supposed to be blown away by artillery, but there it was 20 feet through and so thick a cat couldn't crawl through. One of my crew was hit there but managed to get back. We stood in front of the Fritz trying to get through with Fritz shooting us down. A number saw the hopelessness of our position and retired back to the trench.

"I was lying in a shell hole against the wire when I heard some one calling my name and Reid came creeping into the shell hole covered with blood and mud. I did my best to bandage him up but I was doubtful regarding his wound. He had been held up by the wire and was slinging bombs into Fritz's trench when a German shot him in the upper part of the arm and the bullet talked about getting to 'Righty' and home. We were unable to move because Fritz was shooting all the time. A few wounded men tried to get back, but were immediately killed. Of course, Reid was unable to move, and I promised to bring him a stretcher as soon as it got dark.
"About noon he said he was cold, and I put my overcoat over him. He gave me his wristwatch and said it was presented to him by his school friends. He did not grumble and said he was sorry he was such a boshier. In fact, he was the stuff heroes are made of. About two o'clock he dropped off to sleep and when I felt him half an hour later he was cold. I felt his heart and shook him, but there was no sign of life. At night I was able to get back."
